

Handwritten scribbles and marks at the top of the page.

70 70 70
70 70 70

Handwritten scribbles in the middle-left section.

Handwritten scribbles in the middle-right section.

Handwritten scribbles in the lower-middle section.

Handwritten scribbles at the bottom of the page.

The Wonderful
L I F E

And most Surprizing
A D V E N T U R E S
O F

Robinson Crusoe,
Of Y O R K, Mariner.

C O N T A I N I N G

A Full and Particular Account how he lived Eight and Twenty Years in an Uninhabited Island, on the Coast of America; how his Ship was lost in a Storm, and all his Companions were drowned; and how he only was cast upon the Shore by the Wreck.

W I T H

A True Relation how he was at last miraculously preserved by Pirates.

Faithfully epitomized from the Three Volumes, and adorned with Cuts suited to the most Remarkable Stories.

L O N D O N :

Printed for J. FULLER, at No. 6, Ave-Maria Lane.

*⁸ Nov 13. 1760

Treaty of Treaty of
Jan 17 1929

T H E

P R E F A C E.

*I*N this new Epitome of the wonderful Life and most surprizing Adventures of Robinson Cruſoe, I think myſelf obliged to acquaint the Reader, “ That all poſſible Care has been taken to preſerve the “ History entire, to correct ſome Miſtakes “ in former Impreſſions, and to add a con- “ ſiderable Number of Faſts and material “ Obſervations that have of late occurred, “ and were never publiſhed but in this “ Edition.”

*T*H E general Succeſs and the juſt Applauſe the Work at large has met with render it needleſs for me to ſay any Thing in its Commendation; nor do I think the weak Exceptions, that have been made againſt the Poſſibility of the Story, deſerve a Obſervation.

The P R E F A C E.

WHAT if the Whole was (as is suggested) a meer Fiction? Yet the Design is justly carried on, and so interspersed with curious Observations and moral Reflections, that all Persons, who have any Taste for the Metaphorical Way of Writing, must allow this a Master Piece, and I will venture to say, the first and best of the Kind that ever appeared in the English Language.

BUT as I hope the Performance will speak better in its own Pavour than any Body can pretend to do, I shall not trouble the Reader, nor myself, with useless Apologies, or attempt to persuade any one into an Opinion of a Work so universally esteemed.

LET this Epitome, which is contracted into as narrow a Compass as possible, be but read over with that Consideration and Sedateness which the Nature of the Design deserves, and then there is no Doubt to be made, but the candid Reader will find a sufficient Return both for his Trouble and Expence; and, with these Cautions, and upon this Presumption, I submit the following Sheets to his Perusal.

T H E
L I F E
A N D
A D V E N T U R E S
O F
Robinson Crusoe.

E, that pretends to publish to the World an Account of his own Life and Actions, is doubtless under the strongest Obligations to confine himself within the strictest Rules of Modesty and Truth; and this, I can assure the Public, I most solemnly determine to do in the following Narration.

I was born at York, in the Year 1632, of a reputable Family: my Father was a Merchant born at Bremen; his original Name was Krentzuzer, which, for the Sake of the English Pronunciation, was afterwards changed into Crusoe. My Mother's Name was Robinson, a Native of the County of York, and for that Reason I was called Robinson, after her maiden Name.

I was the youngest of three Brothers; the eldest was an Officer, and killed in the Wars in the Low-

LIFE and Adventures of Countries, and the other I could never learn any Thing of. My Father intending me for the Law, particular Care was taken of my Education; but all the Pains and Expence were to no Purpose; my Inclinations were bent another Way, and Nothing would serve my Turn, but, at all Hazards, I must go to Sea.

My Father and Mother were both violently against it, and used a Thousand Arguments to dissuade me; but it was ail to no Purpose; my Resolutions were so firmly settled, that neither the Intreaties of a most tender Father, nor the Tears of an affectionate Mother, could make any Impression upon me.

I was then about nineteen Years old, when meeting with one of my School-fellows at Hull, who was going going with his Father, who was Master of a Ship, to London, I acquainted him with my Resolutions, and he readily promised me I should have a free Passage, and be provided with all other Necessaries suitable to the Voyage. Accordingly, without imploring a Blessing of my Parents, I took Shipping on the first of September, 1651.

Our Ship was hardly got clear of the Humber, but we were overtaken by a violent Storm, and, being extremely Sea-sick, I began to reflect upon my Father's good Advice, and the Happiness of a middle State of Life which he proposed to me; resolving, if ever I should be so happy as to set my Feet again upon dry Land, that I would return to my Parents, and beg their Pardon, and bid a final Adieu to my wandering Inclinations.

These were my Thoughts during the Storm; but that was no sooner over, but my good Resolutions decreased with the Danger, particularly when my Companion, coming to me, asked me if I was not a little frightened by the Storm, which, as he expressed it, was only a Cap-full of Wind. Come, Roy, say: he, turn out, and see what fine Weather we have now, and a good Bowl of Punch will drown all your past Sorrows.

In short, the Punch was made and I got very drunk, and then all my former Resolutions and Notions of returning Home vanished. I remained hot-headed for several Days, until I was roused up by another Accident, that had very near put a final End to my wandering Resolutions.

Upon the sixth Day, we came to an Anchor in Yarmouth Road, where we lay Wind-bound with several other Vessels from Newcastle; but there being safe Anchorage, and our Ship being tight, and our Cables good, the Sailors despised all Dangers, and were as merry in this Station, as if they had been on Shore; but on the eighth Day there arose such a strong Gale of Wind, as prevented our riding up the River, which still increasing, our Ship rode Forecastle in, having shipped several large Seas.

It was not long before a general Horror seized the Seamen, and I heard the Master cry, Lord have Mercy upon us, we shall be all lost! For my Part, I kept my Cabin, very sick, till the dreadful Apprehensions of sudden Death made me come upon Deck, and there I was terribly affrighted indeed.

The Sea went Mountains high, and Nothing was to be expected but unavoidable Destruction. Two of the Ships had already cut their Masts by the Board; two more had lost their Anchors, and were forced out to the Mercy of the Tempest, and we, to save our Lives, were forced to cut away both our Fore-mast and Main-mast.

It is easy to judge the Condition I was in, who, being but a Fresh-water Sailor, was in a far worse Case than any of them. Our Ship was very strong, but, as I understood by them, too heavy laden, which made the Sailors cry out, She would founder.

The Storm continued extremely violent, and in the Middle of the Night I could hear some crying out, That the Ship had sprung a Leak; others, That there was four Feet Water in the Hold. I was ready to give up the Ghost through Fear, when on a sudden all Hands were called to the Pump, and I among the Rest.

Whilst we were all in this Confusion and Distress, the Master happened to espy some light Colliers, and fired a Gun as a signal of our Misery: I was not then a Sailor good enough to know the Meaning of the Gun; but I soon understood it was a Token of our extreme Danger, and I must freely own it is impossible for me to describe the Agonies I laboured under.

Happy it was for us that in the Storm they regarded our Signal, and with a great Deal of Hazard put out their Long-Boat, and by wonderful Providence saved our Lives, but with the greatest Difficulty; for we had hardly got into the Boat, but we saw our Ship sink to the Bottom, and we had infallibly been every Soul drowned, if they had not come in that very Nick of Time to our Assistance.

It was not without a great Deal of Danger and Difficulty that they recovered their own Ship; however they made a shift to land us at a Place called Cromer, near Winterton Light-House, from whence we all walked in a most miserable drowned Condition to Yarmouth, where the good People furnished us with Necessaries, either for London or Hull.

I have often thought since, that it was very strange, that, after these great Misfortunes at setting out, I did not (like the Prodigal) return to my Father, who, having heard of the Ship's Misfortune, had all the Reason in the World to think I was lost. But my ill Fate still pushed me on in Spight of all the strong Convictions of Reason, Conscience, and Experience.

After three Days Stay at Yarmouth, I met the young Man that invited me to go on Board with his Father. I found his Face and his Behaviour very much altered, and I found likewise he had told his Father who I was, and that I had taken this Voyage only for a Trial, in Order to proceed farther abroad hereafter.

When the old Gentleman saw me, says he, Young Man, you ought never to attempt to go to Sea any more; for, depend upon it, you never will be prosperous in a seafaring Condition. You see what ill Success Heaven has set before your Eyes, and perhaps our Misfortune may in some Measure be owing to you. Pray, (added he,) tell me truly upon what Motive you first undertook this Voyage. Upon this I told him the whole; at the End of which he broke out into the following Exclamation:

Oh ye eternal Powers! What great Offence have I committed that I should take such a desperate abandoned Wretch into my Ship, that has brought all these Miseries and Misfortunes upon me! After his Passion was a little abated, he proceeds, Young Man, depend upon it, if you do not return and submit to your Parents, wherever you go, the Anger of God will certainly pursue you, and you will meet with Nothing but Ruin and Disaster, until your Father's Words are fulfilled upon you. And so he left me.

And now again I had some Notion of returning Home; but that was quickly over-ruled by a foolish Opinion, that, if I did, my Neighbours and Acquaintance would laugh at me. So strange is the Nature of Youth, that, though they oft do foolish Things without either Shame or Remorse, yet at the same Time they are ashamed to own their Folly, and repent.

In short, I made the best of my Way to London, being at all Hazards resolved upon a Voyage; and, being acquainted with the Captain of a Ship, a Voyage I soon heard of to the Coast of Guinea. Having some Money, and appearing like a Gentleman, I did not go on Board like a common Sailor, but soon got so far into the Captain's Favour, that he told me I should be his Mels-mate, and should have have full Liberty to carry with me what Merchandise I should think fit, and to dispose of it to my own Advantage.

I was wonderfully pleased with this kind Offer, and concluded that now I had an Opportunity of making my Fortune; and, in Order to my Voyage, I sent to my Friends for some Money to fit me out; who accordingly remitted me forty Pounds, which I laid out in Goods, according to his Directions. He taught me to keep a Journal, and several of the most useful Parts of Navigation. And indeed, by his Assistance, and by my own Industry, in this Voyage I became both a Sailor and a Merchant. Part of this Voyage I was excessively sick of a Calenture, occasioned by the extraordinary Heat of the Climate, being in the Latitude of almost 15 Degrees North of the Line; however, I recovered, and managed my little Stock so well, that I brought over with me five Pounds and nine Ounces of Gold Dust, which produced at London near three hundred Pounds Sterling.

Soon after my Return, my good Friend the Captain died: Although this was a very great Grief to me, yet I resolved to go another Voyage with his Mate, who had got the Command of the Ship. This Voyage proved a very unsuccessful one. I carried with me about one hundred Pounds, and left the Rest with the Captain's Widow, and so to Sea we went. But, as we were sailing towards the Canary-Islands, we found we were chased by a Sallee Rover, who, in Spite of all the Sail we could make, in a short Time came up with us; and now there was no Remedy but to fight or be taken.

They had 18 Guns, and our Ship but 12; however, about three in the Afternoon, we came to an Engagement;

Engagement; many were killed on both Sides, but, at length, being over-powered by their Numbers, we were forced to submit, and all carried into Sallee. Our Men were sent to the Emperor's Court to be sold; but the Captain of the Pirates, taking a particular Liking to me, kept me for his own Slave.

It was in this miserable Condition that my Father's Words came afresh into my Remembrance, and my Thoughts were continually at Work to make my Escape. My Patron entrusted me with the Management of his Garden and House; and indeed I was not without Hopes but at some Time or other an Opportunity might offer: The worst of it was, I had no Mortal to communicate my Thoughts to; and so, for two Years, I could find Nothing practicable.

In Length of Time, I found my Patron was grown so poor, that he could not fit out his Ship as usual; and then he used constantly once or twice a Week to go out fishing, taking me and a Morisco Boy to row the Boat; and so much pleased was he with my Dexterity in fishing, that he would often send me with a Moor, his Kinsman, and the Boy, to catch Fish for him.

One Morning as we were at the Sport, there arose so thick a Fog that we lost our Way, and, rowing all Night, when it was light we found ourselves at least two Leagues in the Ocean; however, we made a Shift to get on Shore. But, to prevent the like Misfortune for the Future, my Patron ordered a Carpenter to build a little State Room in the Middle of the Long Boat, with a Place behind to steer, and other Conveniences to keep out the Weather.

In this he would often take us out fishing; and, one Time particularly, he invited three or four Persons of Distinction to go along with him, and made extraordinary Preparations for their Entertainment; providing providing also three Fuzees, with a sufficient Quantity of Powder and Shot, that they might have some Sport at Fowling, as they passed along the Shore. The next Morning, the Boat being in Readiness, on a sudden their Minds altered; however, my Patron ordered us to go and catch a Dish of Fish, for that he was resolved his Guests should sup with him.

And now it was that I began to think of my Deliverance; and, in Order to it, I persuaded the Moor to get some Provision on Board, and also some Powder and Shot to shoot Curlews, which were very plentiful in those Parts. I took Care to provide privately whatever else I could think was the most necessary for the present Expedition, resolving to make my Escape, or perish in the Attempt.

When we were past the Cattle, we fell to fishing, and I stood farther into the Sea; and, when we were got at least a League, I gave the Boy the Helm, and seized Muley by Surprize, and threw him over-board; Muley, said I, I never designed you any Harm; and seek Nothing but my own Redemption; I know you are able to swim to Shore; but if you offer to follow me, that very Moment I will shoot you through the Head: Upon which he instantly turned about, and I make no Doubt but he got safe to Shore.

This Action frightened the poor Boy exceedingly; however, I soon eased him of his Fear, by telling him, If he would be a good Boy, and swear by Mahomet, and the Beard of his Father, to serve me faithfully, I would be very kind to him; the poor Child seemed wonderfully pleased with my Promise, and readily consented, and from that Time I began to love him entirely.

We pursued our Voyage, keeping still on the Barbary Coast; but in the Dusk of the Evening I changed my Course, steering directly S. and by E. that we might

might always be near the Shore; and, having a pleasant Gale, I found, the next Day, by three in the Afternoon, we were got 150 Miles beyond the Dominions of the Emperor of Morocco; yet still I was under dreadful Apprehensions of being re-taken.

I continued sailing for five Days together, until I concluded, that, if any Vessel was in Pursuit of me, I was got so far to the Southward, that they would not think proper to follow me any farther.

After all this Fatigue, I anchored in the Mouth of a little River; but where I knew not, neither could I see any People to make a Discovery. What I chiefly wanted was fresh Water, which I resolved to go on Shore to find out as soon as it grew duskish: But no sooner did it begin to grow dark, but we heard such Howlings and Yellings of wild Beasts and Monsters, that I must needs own I was exceedingly terrified.

Poor Xury passionately begged me not to go on-shore that Night. The Boy had a great deal of Wit; for which, and some broken English which he had learnt among the Captives of our Nation, I was mightily pleased with him. Nevertheless, the Howlings and Bellowings were so very dreadful, that we had but little Rest that Night; and, to add to our Confusion, we discovered one of the Monsters making towards us; upon which I took up one of my Guns and shot at him; whether I hit him, or not, I cannot say, but he made towards the Shore, and the Noise of my Gun increased the stupendous Noise of other Monsters.

The next Morning I resolved to go on Shore, and at all Hazards get some fresh Water; the poor Boy would have taken one of the Jars and fetched me some; but I refused, telling him we would both go together, and take the same Fate; and accordingly we took our Arms, and two Jars for Water, and away we went.

I did not go out of the Sight of the Boat for Fear the Savages should come down the River in their Canoes, and take it away; but the Boy, seeing a Vale a little farther, ventured to it, and, returning with Precipitation, I thought that he was either pursued by the Savages or some wild Beast; upon which I ran towards him, resolving to perish, or preserve him; but, as he came nearer to me, I saw a Creature hanging at his Back like one of our Hares, but something larger, which proved to be good and wholesome Meat, and, what added most to our Joy, the Boy assured me there was Plenty of fresh Water in the very Creek where the Boat lay.

In this Place I began to consider that the Canary-Islands and Cape de Verd could not be far off; but, having no Instrument, I knew not in what Latitude we were, or when to stand off to Sea for them; my Hopes were to meet some of the English trading Vessels, that would consequently take us in, and relieve us.

The Place I was in, was doubtless that wild uninhabited Country that lies between the Emperor of Morocco's Dominions and the Negroes; it abounds with wild Beasts of all Sorts, and the Moors use it for hunting. From this I thought I saw Mount Teneriffe in the Canaries, and tried twice to steer my Course that Way, but was as often driven back, and compelled to seek my Fortune along the Shore.

One Morning very early we came to an Anchor at a small Point, and the Tide beginning to flow, we were preparing to go farther in; but Xury, whose youthful and penetrating Eyes saw farther than I, desired me to keep out to Sea, or we should be devoured; For look yonder Meyter, said he, and see dat huge Monster fast asleep on de Side of de Hill: He pointed to the Place, and I discovered a Lion of prodigious Size basking himself under the Shade of a Hill. Xury, said I, you shall go on Shore and kill him; the Boy looked amazed, Me kill him, said he, he eat me at one Mouth, meaning one Mouthful. Upon which I took my biggest Gun, and charging it well, shot at him, and broke one of his Legs; and then with a Shot from my other Gun I killed him.

But the Flesh of this Creature not being good for Food, I thought this was spending our Ammunition in vain; indeed I thought the Skin, when it was dry, might be of some Use, and so determined to sea it off, which took up a whole Day to effect.

From

From thence we went to the Southward, resolving to live sparingly on our Provisions, and go on Shore as seldom as possible, my Design being to reach Gambia, or any other Place about the Cape de Verd, in Hopes to meet some European Ship; and, if Providence did not favour me in this, my next Resolution was to seek for the Islands, and venture myself among the Negroes; for, without one of these, I could have no other Prospect but starving.

As we were sailing pretty near the Shore, we could discover several People upon it, looking after us: We could perceive they were Blacks, naked and unarmed all, except one who had Something in his Hand like a Stick, which Xury told me was a Lance, with which they could kill at a great Distance; I was inclinable to have gone on-shore, but Xury cried, No, no; however, I drew as near to the Shore as I could, and talked to them by Signs, till I made them sensible I wanted Something; they made Signs again to me to stop my Boat, whilst two of them ran up into the Country, and, in less than Half an Hour, brought me two Pieces of dry Flesh and some Corn, which we kindly accepted; and, to prevent any Fears, they laid it down, and went and stood at a Distance till we had fetch'd it on Board, and then came close up to us again.

was

But, while we were returning Thanks to them, being all we could afford, two mighty Creatures came from the Mountains in Pursuit of each other;—they passed passed the Negroes with great Swiftneſs, and jumped directly into the Sea, wantonly ſwimming about, as if the Water had put a Stop to their Fury. At laſt, one of them coming nearer to the Boat than I deſired, I took one of my Guns and let fly at him and killed him.

I cannot expreſs the Conſternation of the poor Negroes, upon hearing the Report of the Gun; nor their Surprize at ſeeing the Creature ſlain by it. I made Signs to them to draw it out of the Water by a Rope, which they accordingly did; and then I perceived it to be a beautiful Leopard, which made me deſirous of the Skin; and, the Negroes being no leſs deſirous of the Fleſh, I freely gave it them. As for the other (which was likewiſe a Leopard) it made back to the Mountains with prodigious Swiftneſs.

The Negroes having furniſhed us with the beſt Proviſions that the Nature of the Country and Circumſtances would allow, I took my Leave of them; and, in eleven Days Sail, I came in Sight of Cape de Verd, or thoſe Iſlands that go by that Name; but could not by any Means reach either of them. Upon which I grew extremely dejected; when Xury (with a Sort of Terror) cried out, Maſtro, Maſtro, a great Ship with a Sail! I ſoon perceived ſhe was a Portugueze, and, as I conjectured, bound to Guinea for Negroes; upon which I ſtrove all I could to come up with them; but all my ſtriving had been in vain, if they had not happened to eſpy, and ſhortened their Sail to ſtop for me.

Encouraged by this I ſet up my Antient, and fired a Gun, both as Signals of Diſtreſs; upon which they kindly lay to, till I came up with them. It happened there was a Scotch Sailor on Board, to whom I made my Caſe known; and then they took me into their Ship.

You may well imagine my Joy was exceedingly great for this unexpected Deliverance; especially when I found the Captain of the Ship was very kind and compassionate to me; to whom, in Return for his Friendship, I offered all I had, which he generously refused, telling me, His Christian Charity taught him better; These Effects you have, says he, will be a Means to support you when you come to the Brasils, and provide for your Passage home to your native Country. And indeed he acted with strict Justice towards me in all Respects.

He bought my Boat of me, and gave me his Note to pay me eight Pieces of Eight for it when we came to the Brasils: He also gave me sixty for my Boy Xury, from whom I parted with great Reluctance; however, the Boy being willing, I agreed he should be set at Liberty after ten Years Service.

We arrived at the Bay of All-Saints after 22 Days Sail. The good Man would not take any Thing for my Passage. He gave me 20 Ducats for the Leopard's Skin, and 40 for the Lion's; every Thing he caused to be delivered, and what I would sell he bought. In short, I made 220 Pieces of my small Cargoe, and with this little Stock I began, as it were, to enter a-new into the World.

He recommended me to an honest Planter, with whom I lived, till I had informed myself in the Manner of Planting and making Sugar; and observing the great Advantages of that Business, I resolved to get the Money I had left behind me in England remitted, and to buy a Plantation.

In short, I purchased a Plantation adjoining to an honest Portuguese, born of English Parents, whom, upon all Occasions, I found a very kind and useful Neighbour. Our Stocks at first were both very low; nevertheless, nevertheless, by our Industry and Care, in a short Time we made several considerable Improvements, and began to grow rich. And now it was I repented the Loss of my dear Boy Xury. Having no Mortal to assist me, nor any Body to converse with but my Neighbour.

I was in some Measure settled, before the Captain that took me up left the Brafils. One Day I went to him and told him what Stock I had left in London, and desired his Assistance in getting a Remittance; to which the good Gentleman readily consented, but would have me only send for Half, lest it should miscarry, and if it did the Rest would support me; so, taking Letters of Procuracy from me, he assured me he would serve me to the utmost of his Power; and in Truth he kept his Word, and was extremely kind to me upon all Occasions.

And now my Wealth began to increase a-pace; and, in this State, I might have lived very happy, if my Ambition and roving Inclination had not had too great Power over me. I had now lived some Years in the Brafils, and I not only learnt the Language, but contracted an Acquaintance with several of the most eminent Merchants at St. Salvadore, to whom relating the Manner of my two Voyages to Guinea, and the great Advantages of trading in those Parts, they gave such earnest Attention to what I said, that three came one Morning, and told me, that they had a Mind to fit out a Ship to go to Guinea, and if I would go their Supercargo, and manage the Trade, I should have an equal Share, without putting in any Stock.

This I took to be so fair a Proposal, that, upon Condition they would look after my Plantation in my Absence, I consented to it; and accordingly, a Ship being fitted out, and all Things in Readiness, we set Sail the first of September 1659, steering Northward upon the Coast, in Order to gain the Coast of Africa. But many Days we had not sailed before we were overtaken by a violent Storm, which lasted 12 Days successively; when the Weather cleared, we found ourselves 11 Degrees in the Northern Latitude, upon the Coast of Guinea; upon which the Captain gave Reasons for returning, which I opposed, counselling him rather to stand away for Barbadoes, where I judged we might arrive in 15 Days. So altering our Course we steered Westward, in Order to reach the Leeward-Islands; and here it was we were overtaken by a terrible Tempest.

Sail

In this great Distress, one of our Men cried out, Land! Land! When, looking out that very Moment, we found our Ship was struck upon the Sand, and expected we should sink, and that we should be all immediately lost. We knew not where we were driven, and, what was worse, were certain the Ship could not hold out many Moments longer.

Whilst we were looking upon one another, expecting Death every Moment, the Mate, assisted by the Crew, hauled out the Long-boat, and 11 of us committed ourselves to the Fury of the Sea and God's Mercy; we soon found that this last Effort was to no Purpose, for the Tempest was so violent, and the Sea ran so very high, that it was impossible for the Boat to live. When we had been driven about a League, comes a prodigious Wave a-stern of us and overset us in an Instant, so that we had hardly Time to call upon God to receive our Souls.

When Men are struggling with the Pangs of Death they are commonly insensible; but the Case was quite different with me; for, while I was overwhelmed with the Water, I had the most dreadful Apprehensions; and the Joys of Heaven and the Torments

Torments of Hell were alternately in my Thoughts, and yet still I kept striving on, while all my Companions were lost, till the Wave had spent itself, and, retiring, had thrown me upon the Shore, half dead with the great Quantity of Water I had taken in during my struggling; however, I got upon my Feet as fast as I could, lest another Wave should carry me back. But, notwithstanding I made all the Speed I could yet another Wave came, which dashed me against a Piece of a Rock, in such a furious Manner, that it made me senseless. However, (recovering a little before the Return of the next Wave, which would doubtless have carried me off,) I held fast hold of the Rock till the succeeding Wave abated, and then I made shift to reach the main Land; we were, tired and almost spent, I sat down upon the Shore, contemplating the Manner of my present Preservation.

After I had returned my Thanks to Almighty God for this wonderful Preservation, I began to look about me, to consider what Place I was in, and what was next to be done in Order to my future Subsistence. I could neither see House nor People; wet and hungry, and Nothing to help me, not so much as a Weapon to defend me against the wild Beasts. In short, I had Nothing in the World but a Knife, a short Tobacco-pipe, and a Box half full of Tobacco; and, what was worse, Night coming on, I was under the most dreadful Apprehensions of being devoured by wild Beasts that I heard howling and roaring round about me; so that I had no Prospect but to expect another Kind of Death more terrible than that I had so lately escaped. In this Distress, I walked about a Furlong into the Country to seek fresh Water, which I luckily happened upon; so, taking to a Tree, I seated myself so that I could not fall, and there I slept till Morning.

It was Day-light before I left my Apartment in the Tree; when, coming down, and looking round, I perceived that the Tempest was ceased, and that the Ship was driven to the Rock where I escaped, and, looking farther, I saw the Ship's Boat lying about a Mile to the Right, where the Waves had cast her up.

I hoped to have got to the Boat, but the Water between that and the Shore rendered that impracticable; so I turned again towards the Ship, in Hopes to get Something from thence for my present Subsistence.

At all Hazards I resolved to get to the Ship, and so, stripping, leaped into the Water, and, swimming round her, I had the good Fortune to espy a Rope hanging so low down that I could reach it: by the Help of which, with some Difficulty, I got into the Forecastle. Here I found that the Ship was bulged, her Head lifted up against a Bark, and her Stern almost in the Water; all her Quarter, and what was there, were free and dry; and I found the Provisions in good Order, and wanted Nothing but a Boat to carry what I had Occasion for.
round

Necessity, which is the Mother of Invention, put a Project into my Head; there were on-board several spare Yards, a spare Top-mast or two, and three large Spars of Wood; with these I fell to work, flinging as many of them over-board as I could manage, and tied them together that they might not drive away; when this was done, I tied them together in Form of a Raft, and laid three or four short Pieces of Planks on them cross-ways; I found it would bear me, but a very little Weight besides; and so, to strengthen my Raft, I cut a Top-mast into three or four Lengths, and added them to it; and then I considered what was most proper to load it with, it being capable of carrying a tolerable Weight.

At first, I laid upon it all the Boards I could get, and then I lowered down three of the Seamen's Chests, and filled them with Provisions of all Sorts; I found Cloaths enough, but then I took no more than my present Occasions required.

My Concern was chiefly upon Tools to work with, and Fire-Arms and Ammunition; and, accordingly, I found, in my Search, the Carpenter's Chest; and, in the great Cabin, some Fire-Arms and Ammunition, all which I put on-board my Raft, and so, with two broken Oars, &c. I put to Sea.

Though every Thing at first seemed to favour my Design, yet, after I had sailed about a Mile, I found on a sudden the Fore-parts of my Raft run a-ground, so that it was with the greatest Difficulty imaginable I kept my Cargo tight together; and, indeed, if I had not been extremely diligent and careful, all had been lost, and sunk into the Sea: But, after some Time, Providence so ordered it, that, at the Rising of the Water, my Raft floated again, and so I happily landed my Effects.

Not far from the Place where I landed, which was at the Mouth of a little Cave, I discovered a very high Hill, surrounded with a great many little ones, and thither I resolved to go and view the Country, and see what Place was proper for me to fix my Habitation in; and accordingly, arming myself with a Fowling-piece, a Pistol, and some Ammunition, I ascended the Mountains, and there found I was in an Island, being surrounded by the Sea. It seemed to be a barren uncultivated Country, and only inhabited by wild Beasts.

Returning afterwards to my Raft, I got my Goods on-shore, and, being very much afraid of the wild Beasts, I made a Sort of Fence or Barricade about it, which I thought might in some Measure secure me against the Dangers I was apprehensive of; and so that Night I slept very comfortably, and the next Morning, when I awaked, I resolved to go again to the Ship to get such other Necessaries in as I had most Occasion for, before another Storm came, when I knew she must be dashed to Pieces.

In Order to this second Expedition, I mended my Raft where I found it defective, and brought away from the Ship a great many other Tools, Cloaths, Ammunition, and whatever else I thought most necessary for my future Preservation and Subsist. Then I made Haste to Shore, fearing the wild I might come and devour what I had already lar.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.

When I had landed all the second Cargo, I fell immediately to work to make me a little Tent, and fortified it in the best Manner I could, to secure myself as much as possible against any sudden Attempt either from Man or Beast: After this I charged my Fire-Arms, blocked up the Doors, and laid the Bed I had brought from the Ship upon the Ground, and slept as comfortably as though I had been in my native Country.

But still the Thoughts of my future Subsistence and Preservation were uppermost in my Mind, and therefore I went to the Ship as often as possible, and brought away every Thing I thought could be of any Use; and, indeed, had so stored myself, that I judged I was tolerably provided for a considerable Time.

I had now been eleven Days in the Island, and as many Times on-board the Ship; as I was going the twelfth Time, the Wind began to rise; however, I ventured at low Water, and, with some Difficulty, reached the Ship, and, rummaging the Cabins, I found several other Necessaries, and, among other Things, above 36*l.* Sterling, in Pieces of Eight; which, considering my present Circumstances, I concluded was of small Value to me; however, I wrapped it up in a Canvas Bag, and, perceiving the Storm began to increase, with all that I was able to carry with me I made the best of my Way to the Shore.

That Night I slept very contentedly in my little Fortification; but, when I looked out in the Morning, I found that the Ship was lost. I was very much concerned at this upon my Thoughts; but, when I reflected I had done every Thing in my Power to recover what was useful to me, I comforted myself in the best Manner I could, and submitted myself entirely to the Will of Providence.

And now my Thoughts were wholly taken up how to defend and preserve myself from the Savages and wild Beasts, which I was extremely apprehensive might be in some Part or other of this Island; and at one Time I thought to dig me a Cave, at another to build me a Tent; at length I resolved to do both, and accordingly contrived in the following Manner.

I considered the Ground, where it was, was moorish, and that I had no Conveniences of fresh Water; and therefore I determined to find out a Place more healthful and convenient; and, to my great Comfort and Satisfaction, I soon found one that answered my Expectation.

The Place was a little Plain near a rising Hill; the Front being as steep as the Side of a House. On the Side of this Rock was a little hollow Piece, resembling the Entrance of a Cave; just before this Place I resolved my Tent should stand. This Plain was a Hundred Yards broad, and twice as long, with a pleasant Descent every Way to the Sea-side. After this I drew a Semi-circle, containing about ten Yards in the Diameter; and, when that was done, I drove a Row of Stakes not above six Inches from each other; and, by the Help of my Cables which I had brought from the Ship, and such other Materials as I made Use of, I made a Sort of regular Fortification; which I concluded was in a great Measure impregnable against any sudden Attempts either of Savages or wild Beasts; and, for my better Security, I would have no Doors, but came in by the Help of a Ladder, which I made for that Purpose.

Into this little Garrison I carried all my Store and Ammunition, and afterwards continued to work; I not only made me a little Cellar, but likewise made my Fortification stronger by the Earth and Stones I dug dug out of the Rock. One Day a Shower of Rain falling, attended with Thunder and Lightning, I was under terrible Apprehensions lest my Powder should take Fire, and not only hinder me from killing Fowls, which were necessary for my Subsistence, but likewise blow me up and my Garrison at once: the Quantity I had by me consisted of 150 lb Weight at least. Having thus established myself as a King of the Island, I went every Day with my Gun to see what I could kill that was fit to eat, and soon perceived there were great Numbers of Goats, but they were shy; however, watching them very narrowly, I happened to shoot a she-Goat as she was suckling her young one, which, not thinking her Dam killed, followed me Home to my Enclosure. I lifted the Kid over the Pales, and would willingly have kept it alive, but, the poor Creature refusing to eat, I was forced to kill it for my Subsistence.

Thus, entering into as odd a State of Life as ever befel any unfortunate Man, I was continually reflecting upon the Misery of my Condition; till, at length, considering there was no Remedy, and that I was obliged to make the best of a bad Market, and withal reflecting upon the many Turns of Providence in my particular Preservation, I grew more sedate and temperate,

It was, by the Account I kept, the 30th of September when I first landed on this Island; about twelve Days after, fearing I should lose my Reckoning of Time, nay, even forget the Sabbath, for want of Pen, Ink, and Paper, I carved it with a Knife upon a large Post, in large Letters, setting it up in the Similitude of a Cross on the Shore where I landed, viz. I came to Shore, Sept. 30, 1650. Every Day I cut a Notch on the Sides of this square Post, and that for the Sabbath was as long again as the Rest, and every first Day of the Month as long again as that long one. In this Manner I kept my Calendar, in weekly, monthly, and yearly, Reckoning of Time; but, had I made a more strict Search, (as I afterwards did,) I need not have set up this Mark; for I found, among the Parcels belonging to the Gunner, Carpenter, and Captain's Mate, those very Things I wanted, where I got not only Pens and Ink, but likewise Sea-Compasses, and other mathematical Instruments; and, above all the Rest, three English Bibles, with several other good English Books, which I carefully laid up, in Order to make Use of them at proper Intervals. But here I cannot but call to Mind our having a Dog and two Cats on board, whom I made Inhabitants with me in my Castle. But, notwithstanding I was thus plentifully supplied, I still wanted several other Necessaries, as Needles and Thread, and more particularly a Pick-axe and Shovel for removing the Earth, &c.

It was a full Year before I had finished my little Fortification; and, after I had done that in the best Manner the Nature of the Place and my Circumstances would allow, I began to grow a little more familiar with my Solitude, and to consider of the best Methods possible to render my desolate State as easy as I could; and here it was that I began the following Journal.

JOURNAL.

September 30, 1659; I was forced by Shipwreck upon this desolate Island, which I called The Island of Despair; the next Day I spent in reflecting on the Miserableness of my Condition, which presented to me Nothing but Death, and the worst of Deaths.

Death too, viz. either to be starved for Want of Victuals, or to be devoured by wild Beasts.

October 1. To my great Comfort, I discovered the Ship driven to the Shore, from whence I had some Hopes that, when the Storm was abated, I might recover Something towards my present Subsistence, especially, considering, I observed the Ship to lie, in a great Measure, upright, and one Side of her perfectly dry; upon which I fell immediately to wading over the Sands, and with great Difficulty and Danger I got on-board. To the 14th of this Month I spent in making Voyages backwards and forwards to and from the Ship, the Weather being all the while very wet and uncertain.

Oct. 20. My Raft with my Goods was overfet; most of which, however, I recovered at low Water.

Oct. 25. It blew a Sort of a Storm, and rained hard, so that the Ship was dashed to Pieces, and Nothing of her was to be seen but the very Hull at low Water; and this Day I thought it proper to secure the Effects, I had preserved, from the Weather.

Oct. 26. I wandered about to try if I could find a Place proper to fix my Abode; and, accordingly, towards the Evening, I found out a Rock, where I judged I might erect a Wall and fortify myself.

November 1. I placed my Tent by the Side of a Rock, and took up my Lodging in a Hammock, very contentedly, for that Night.

November 2. I made a Fence about my Tent with Timber, Chests, and Boards.

November 3. I shot two wild Fowls, which proved very good Meat; and in the Afternoon I made me a Sort of a Table.

November 4. I began to live regularly. In the Morning I walked out for an Hour or two, and afterwards worked till about Two, then ate my Dinner of such Provisions as I had; after Dinner I commonly slept an Hour or two; and, the Weather being extremely hot, I could not go to work till towards the Evening.

Nov. 5. I went out with my Gun and the Dog I had brought out of the Ship; I shot a wild Cat, but her Flesh was good for Nothing, only I preserved her Skin; I saw a great Flock of wild Birds, and was wonderfully terrified at the Sight of some monstrous Seals which I saw on the Sand; but as they saw me they made off to the Sea.

Nov. 9. I finished my Table: From the 7th to the 12th, the Weather being fair, I worked very hard, only I rested upon the 11th; which, according to my Computation, I took to be Sunday.

Nov. 13. The Weather was very wet and stormy, with Thunder and Lightning. On the 14th I made Provision to secure my Powder, which I perfected on the 14th and 15th; the 17th, I began to dig upon the Rock, but was prevented for Want of proper Implements; and on the 18th I found a Tree, the Wood of which was very hard, and, out of that, with the greatest Difficulty, I made me a Sort of Spade; in doing it I almost spoiled my Axe, which might have been of ill Consequence.

Nov. 23. When I had got my Tools into the best Order I could, I spent all my Time to the 10th of December in finishing my Cave, and lay in my Tent every Night, unless the Weather was so wet that I could not lie dry; and withal, I had so well tnatched it over with Flags and the Leaves of Trees, &c. that I thought myself tolerably secure.

Dec. 10. I had no sooner finished my Habitation, but a great Part of the Roof fell in upon me; and it was a great Mercy I had not perished in the Ruins; and indeed it gave me a great Deal of Trouble before I repaired it effectually; and, after I had done what I could could, I spent several Days in putting my Things in Order, and had Variety of Weather to the 27th.

Dec. 27. In my Rounds I chanced to meet some Goats; I shot one of them and lamed another, which I led Home, bound up its Leg, and in a little Time it grew well, and was so tame and familiar, that it followed me every where like a Dog, which put the Notion into my Head to bring up these wild Creatures, as often as I could take them alive, that I might have a Stock to subsist upon, in Case I should live after my Powder was exhausted.

Dec. 28, 29, 30. The Weather was so very hot, that I was forced to keep within my Shelter.

January 1. Though the Weather continued very sultry, yet Necessity compelled me to go abroad with my Gun. In the Valleys I found great Numbers of Goats, but they were so very shy, I could by no Means come at one of them.

From January 3, to the 13th, my Business was to search the Island, and to finish my Wall. In my Search I found great Numbers of Fowl, much like our English Pigeons; I shot some of them, which proved excellent Food: And now it was a very providential Thing happened; which was thus:

Whilst I was rummaging among my Moveables, what should fall into my Hands but a Bag, which I suppose might be made Use of to hold Corn for the Fowls in the Ship. I purposed to make Use of it to hold some of the Powder, and so shook out the Dust and loose Corn upon one Side of the Rock, not in the least suspecting the Consequence. The Rain had fallen in great Quantities a few Days before, and the Month after, to my great Surprise, I discovered Something spring up very green and flourishing, and, as I came daily to view it, I saw several Ears of green Barley of the very same Size and Shape of those in England.

My Thoughts were very much confus'd at this unexpected Sight; and, I must own, I had the Vanity to imagine, that Providence had order'd this on Purpose for my Subsistence. Great were my Acknowledgment and Thankfulness to Almighty God, for his Mercies to me in this desolate Place; which were infinitely heightened, when, at the same Time, I observ'd some Rice Stalks, wonderfully green and flourishing; which made me conclude here must consequently be more Corn in the Island; and, accordingly, I spent several Days in searching the Rocks; when at length it came into my Mind that I had shaken the Bag on the very Spot where those Blades of Corn were growing.

It was about the latter End of June before these Ears of Corn grew ripe, and then I laid them up exceeding carefully, expecting I should one Day reap the Advantage of this little Crop, which I us'd all my Industry to improve; and yet it was four Years before I could eat any Barley Bread, and much longer before I had any Benefit from my Rice. After this, with indefatigable Care and Industry, I finish'd my Wall, ordering it so, that I had no Way to go in my Fortrefs but by a Ladder.

April 16. I finish'd my Ladder, and went up it, and pull'd it after me as I always did; and, in Truth, had so well fortified myself, that I was, as I thought, indifferently well secur'd against any Surprise; nevertheless, as I was one Day sitting in my Cave, there happen'd such a sudden Earthquake, that the Roof of my little Fortrefs, that I had finish'd with so much Labour, came tumbling down upon my Head; upon which, with the greatest Amazement, I ran to my Ladder, and got out of my Cave, and saw the Top of a vast Rock fall into the Sea, and expect'd every Moment the whole Island would be swallow'd up.

In this Affright I remained for some Moments, till I perceived the Fury of the Motion began to abate; but it was not long before I was under new Apprehensions, on Account of a violent Tempest that attended it. This dreadful Storm continued for about three Hours, and then followed such a heavy Rain, that my Tent was quite overflowed; upon which I concluded my Habitation was ill situated, and determined, as soon as possible, to build me one in a more convenient Place.

April 29, 30, were spent in contriving how, and in what Manner, I should fix my new Abode; and herein I was under the greatest Concern, having no Tools fitting for such an Undertaking; however, I spent several Days in whetting and grinding my Tools.

May 1. As I was walking along the Sea-side, I found a Barrel of Gun powder, and divers other Pieces of the Ship, which the Violence of the late Storm had thrown on the Sand. I saw likewise the remaining Part of the Ship, thrown up by the Tempest, very near the Shore, and resolved to get to her as soon as I could; but at that Time I found it impracticable.

I continued to work upon the Wreck till the 24th, and every Day recovered Something that would be of Use to me, and got together so many Planks, and so much Iron, Lead, and other Necessaries, that, if I had had Tools and Skill, I might have built me a Boat; which was a Thing I very much wanted.

June 16. As I was strolling towards the Sea, I found a large Turtle: The 17th I spent in cooking it: I found in her 70 Eggs, and the Flesh the most delicious Meat that ever I tasted. The 18th, I stayed within the whole Day, there being a continual Rain, with Storms of Wind and Lightning.

From the 19th to the 27th of June, I was very sick, and had got a terrible Ague, which often held me for nine or ten Hours with extreme Violence. On the 18th, I began to recover a little, but was very restless in the Night, and was worse; as often as I laid my Eyes together, I was tormented with hideous Dreams and dreadful Apparitions. It is impossible for me to express the Agonies I was under by these repeated Admonitions, as I took them to be. My Father's Advice and Reproof came in my Mind, whether I would or not, and shocked me exceedingly, and would often make me reflect that the Justice of God followed me, and that severe Punishment was justly owing to my Disobedience and wicked Life.

June 28, I slept pretty well most Part of the Night, which refreshed me very much; in the Morning I ate a Biscuit and drank some Water mixed with Rum; I boiled a Piece of Goat's Flesh for my Dinner, but ate very little, and at Night I supped upon three of my Turtle's Eggs; after Supper I attempted to walk out with my Gun, but found myself too weak, and so returned to my Habitation.

Here Conscience flew in my Face, reprehending me as a Blasphemer and a Reprobate; for saying, in my Agonies, What have I done, to be distinguished in all this Scene of Misery? Methought I heard a Voice answering me, Ungrateful Wretch! Dare you ask what you have done? Look upon your past Life, and then ask thyself, Why thou wast not drowned in Yarmouth-Koad, or killed by the Sallee Rovers? Why not devoured by wild Beasts in the Desarts of Africa, or drowned here with the Rest of thy Companions?

Struck dumb by these severe Reflections, and, fearing the Return of my Ague, I began at length to consider what was most proper to be done, to free myself from this Distemper; and, having heard that the Brazilians use Tobacco for most of their Diseases, I resolved to try this Experiment.

free

I tried several Ways with the Tobacco: First, I took a Leaf and chewed it, which made me very sick, and almost stupified me; then I steeped it in Rum, resolving to take a good Dose of it when I went to Bed, and then I put some into a Pan, and burnt it, holding my Nose over the Smoak as long as I could endure it without Suffocation. After these several Operations, I fell into a Sweat, and slept quietly and well for thirteen or fourteen Hours; and, when I got up in the Morning, I found my Spirits revived, my Stomach much better, and I grew exceedingly hungry, which I had not been for some Time past: In short, I missed my Fit the next Day, and found that I every Day grew stronger and better.

The 30th, I ventured out with my Gun, and killed a Fowl not much unlike a Brand-Goose, but did not eat of the Flesh, chusing rather to dine upon two or three more of my Turtle's Eggs. In the Evening I renewed my Medicine; notwithstanding which, I had a little Spice of my Fit the next Day; and, therefore, on the 2d of July, I took my Medicine as I did at first; and on the 14th, which was the Day I expected the Return of my Fit, the Ague left me, which was no small Joy to me; and, indeed, the Goodness of God, on this Occasion, affected me so sensibly, that I fell on my Knees, and returned Thanks in a most devout and solemn Manner.

July 4, I walked out with my Gun; but my Distemper having reduced me very low I could go but a little Way at a Time; for, the Experiment having weakened me exceedingly, I was able to walk but a very short Way at once. I had now been in the Island

Island about ten Months, and all the while had not seen either Man or Woman; and so, growing better, I began to think myself sole Monarch of the Isle; and, growing indifferently well, I resolv'd to take a Tour about the Isle, in Order to view the Extent of my Dominions, and to make what Discoveries I could.

On the 15th I began my Journey; and, among other Things, I found a little Brook of running Water; on the Banks of which were many pleasant Meadows covered with Grass; I saw several Stalks of Tobacco, and other Plants I knew Nothing of; among the Rest I found some Sugar-Canes, several Plants of Aloe-Wands, &c. With these Discoveries I returned well satisfied to my little Castle, and slept that Night very comfortably.

The next Day, going the same Way, and farther than before, I found the Country full of Wood, and exceedingly pleasant and delightful. The Melons lay upon the Ground in great Quantities, and Clusters of Grapes hung upon the Trees. You may imagine I was glad of this Discovery, yet ate very sparingly, lest I should throw myself into a Flux or a Fever.

The Night coming on, I climbed up into a Tree, and, having fixed myself as securely as possible, slept very comfortably, though it was the first Time I had ever lain out of my Habitation. When the Morning came, I proceeded with the greatest Pleasure about four Miles farther; and, at the End of the Valleys, I found a Spring of excellent Water, and the Country all round the most beautiful I ever saw; and now I resolv'd to lay in as much of the Fruits as possible.

July 18. Having prepared two Bags, I returned thither again, in Order to bring Home to my Castle as much of the several Sorts of Fruits as I could, that I might have a Stock by me against I should want it. And now I began to reflect that this Part of the Island was infinitely the best to inhabit in; but then I thought, at the same Time, that, if I removed from my present Place of Abode, I should lose the Prospect of the Sea; and so, if Providence should order a Ship on that Coast, I should lose all Possibility of Deliverance. However, the Place was so delightful, I resolved to build me a Kind of Bower, which took me up the Remainder of July.
that

Here it was I dried my Grapes, which I afterwards carried to my old Habitation, for a Winter Supply. On the 14th of August, the Rain began to fall with great Violence, which made me judge it proper to retire to my Castle for Shelter. The Rains continued to fall, more or less, till the Middle of October, and sometimes with that Violence, that for several Days I could not stir out of my Cave, till I was constrained to it by the pure Want of Food. I went out twice; the first Time I shot a Goat, and the second Time I found another Turtle, as large as the former.

September 30. Casting up the Notches on the Post, which amounted to 365, I concluded this to be the Anniversary of my Landing. And, after I had returned Thanks for my wonderful Preservation in this desolate Island, I went to my Bed, and slept very comfortably.

Before I proceed farther in my Journal, I must take the Liberty to put the Reader in Mind of the Barley and Rice: I had saved about thirty Stalks of the former, and twenty of the latter; and, concluding the Season to be proper, I dug up some Ground with my wooden Spade, and sowed it; which at the proper Time grew up, and answered my Expectations.

The wet Weather was no sooner gone, but my Inclination led me again to the Bower I had built on the other Side of the Island, which I found whole and entire as I had left it, and the Stakes all growing much after the Nature of our Willows, which in Time made me a noble Fence, as I shall have Occasion to observe more particularly hereafter.

And now I conceived that the Seasons of the Year might be divided into wet and dry, and not into Summer and Winter, as in Europe; as thus:

Half { February
March
April } wet, the Sun coming near the Equinox.

Half

ROBINSON CRUSOE.

Half { April
May
June
July
August } dry, the Sun getting South of the Line

Half { August
September
October } wet, the Sun being come back.

Half { October
November
December
January
February } dry, the Sun running South of the Line.

And, as the Wind continued to blow, the wet Seasons would continue either longer or shorter. After I had made these and the like Observations, I always took Care to provide Necessaries, that I might stay within during the Wetness of the Weather, and in that Time I took Care to make me such Tools as I most wanted.

The first Thing I attempted was to make me a Basket, which, after much Labour and Difficulty, I effected; but the two Things I most wanted were utterly out of my Power, viz. some Casks to hold my Liquors, and small Pots to boil and stew my Meat, and also a Tobacco-pipe, for which I at last found out a Remedy.

After the Weather grew fair, my farther Resolution of viewing the whole Island took Place; accordingly, taking my Dog and Gun, and other Necessaries proper, I set forward; and, having passed the Vale where my Bower stood, I came within Sight of the Sea, lying to the W. and, when it was clear Day, I could

I could discover Land, but could not tell whether it was an Island or a Continent; neither could I tell what Place this might be, only I thought it was in America, and consequently that Part of the Country that lies between the Spanish Territories and the Brazils, which abound with Cannibals, who devour human Kind.

In viewing this Part of the Island, I found it was much more pleasant and fruitful than where I had pitched my Tent. Here were great Numbers of Parrots, and with great Difficulty I got one of them which I carried Home with me, but it was a great while before I could tame it and bring it to speak, even so much as to call me by my Name.

In the low Grounds I found great Numbers of Hares and Foxes, and Abundance of Fowls of different Kinds, with great Quantities of Grapes and other excellent Fruits; in this Expedition I did not travel above two Miles a Day, being desirous to make what Discoveries I could. When I came to the Seashore, I was amazed to see it exceedingly beautiful, and so full of excellent Fish. But though this Journey was so delightful to me, yet my secret Inclination led me to my old Habitation; so, after I had set up a Sort of Land-mark for my Guide for the future, I concluded to return back by a different Way than that I came; and, as I was making the best of my Way, my Dog happened to surprise a Kid, which I rescued from him, and led it to my Bower, in Order to try if I could raise a Breed, which at some Time or other I was satisfied would be of great Use to me.

After I had been about a Month upon this Expedition, I returned to my little Castle, and reposed myself with great Pleasure in my Hammock, and continued a Week within to rest and refresh myself.

And now I began to think of the Kid I had left in

in the Bower, and resolv'd immediately to fetch it Edome. When I came there, I found it almost preserv'd; when, feeding it with Branches of such soft rubs as I could find, the poor Creature, in Gratitude to get its Deliverance, followed me, as naturally as my Dog, quite Home to my Castle, which I afterwards receiv'd as one of my Domesticks.

As the wet Season being come, I kept myself within; and, on the 30th of September, being the third Year of my Abode in this Island, I paid my solemn Acknowledgments to Almighty God for my Preservation, and entertained myself with a World of Reflections upon my present and former Condition; and, as I was one Morning sadly pondering upon my present State, I happen'd to open my Bible, when I fix'd my Eyes on these Words, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee; which I presently took as directed to myself: and, I must own, the Expression gave me a great Deal of secret Satisfaction.

The Beginning of this Year I fix'd my daily Employments as follow: The Morning I spent in my Devotions, and paying my Duty to God; after I had done that, I went out with my Gun, to seek Provision; which, after I had got it, took me up some Time in dressing and cooking; in the Middle of the Day I was forc'd to lie by, by Reason of the excessive Heat; and the Rest of the Time I spent in making and contriving such Necessaries as I stood most in Need of.

But now the Time for my little Harvest coming on, I had the desirable Prospect of a good Crop, but my Hopes were sadly disappointed by the Goats and Hares; who, having tast'd the Sweetness of my Corn, had crop'd it so close, that it had not Strength to shoot up into a Stalk: To prevent this, I was forc'd to make a Hedge round it; but I had no sooner done this, than I was infested with Vermin of another Sort; my Back was no sooner turned, but whole Flocks of Birds came and destroyed what others had left; I let fly at these, and killed the rest of them, which I hung upon Stakes, as a Terror to the Rest; which Project had so good an Effect, that they not only forsook the Corn, but that Part of the Island for ever after.

My Corn growing ripe, and Harvest coming on, I cut it down and carried Home the Ears; and, after I had rubbed them, and threshed them in the best Manner I could, as near as I could conjecture, the Produce of the Barley was about two Bushels and a Half, and that of the Rice much about the same Quantity; and now I plainly saw, by the Providence of God, I should be supplied with Corn, though at the same Time I wanted all Manner of Necessaries for making it into Bread, which with the greatest Labour and Difficulty I afterwards supplied.

My Seed being thus increased, my next Care was to prepare more Land to sow it in; and accordingly I fixed upon two large Plats on the Back-side of my Castle, in which I sowed my Seed, and fenced it with a good Hedge, to defend it from the Vermin.

In short, my Corn increased to that Degree, that I thought I might now venture to eat some of it; but how to make it into Bread was still the Difficulty; and yet even this I found the Means to surmount at last; and so, as in all other Emergencies, I found a Remedy beyond my Expectation.

After I had procured every Thing needful for making my Bread, which you may imagine was no small Satisfaction, the Prospect of Land, which I had seen from the other Side of the Island, ran still in my Mind; but how I should come at it, I was utterly at a Loss to know ; I tried to recover the Ship's Boat, and then to make me a Canoe, but all in vain ; and here I could not forbear reflecting upon the Folly of those who undertake Matters that they are not able to go through with.

I was in the Midst of my Projects, when my fourth Year expired since I had been cast on this Island ; nor did I forget to keep my Anniversary with that Solemnity and Devotion that I had done the Year before ; I began to think myself separated from the World, and from all Opportunities of friendly Conversation. I had Nothing to covet, being, as it were, an Emperor or King of a whole Country, where I had Nobody to controul me, nor any Body to govern but myself.

These Thoughts made me look upon the Things of this World with a Sort of religious Contempt, and rendered me easy in my desolate and melancholy Condition ; for, having made God's Mercies to me Matters of the highest Consolation, I relinquished all pensive Thoughts and dismal Apprehensions, and resigned myself up entirely to God's Providence.

My Ink was quite gone, and my Biscuit almost exhausted ; my Linen was worn out, only some of the Sailors checked Shirts remained, which were of mighty Use to me in hot Weather. My Cloaths and Hat were quite worn, but those I supplied by the Help of my Goats-skins, of which I first made me a Sort of a Cap, and then a Waistcoat, and open-kneed Breeches, with the Hair on the Outside ; and thus being perfectly at Ease in my Mind, I spent my Time in contemplating the Blessings of Heaven, and was ravished to think that one Time or other I should be delivered from my present Misfortunes, and placed out of the Reach of them for ever.

For five Years after this Nothing worth mentioning

ing happened, only at spare Times I had finished a small Canoe, with which, at all Hazards, I resolved to try to discover the Circumference of my Dominions; and, in Order to it, I put Provisions on-board, with Ammunition, and all other Necessaries fit for the Expedition.

It was the 16th of November, in the 9th Year of my Reign, that I began this Voyage, which was much longer than I expected, by Reason I had many Difficulties to encounter I did not suspect; and indeed the Rocks were so high, and ran so far into the Sea, that I often resolved to turn back, rather than run the Risque of being driven so far out to Sea as by no Means to be able to get back again.

In this Confusion I came to an Anchor as near to the Shore as possible, to which I waded, and, climbing up to the Top of a high Hill, I viewed the Extent of my Dominions, and, at all Hazards, resolved to pursue my Voyage. It is endless to relate what Danger my Rashness exposed me to; I was driven by the Current so far into the Sea, that I had hardly any Prospect of getting back again; not by all I could do with my Paddles, which I had made to supply the Place of Sculls to help me; and now had no Prospect but perishing at Sea when my Provisions were spent, or, if a Storm should arise, before. However, by the lucky Chance of the Wind, or rather by the particular Providence of God, I was driven back again to the Island, and, to my unspeakable Joy, I came on-shore; where, being exceedingly fatigued with Watching and hard Labour, I laid me down and took a little Rest. After I awoke, and had dressed myself as usual, I laid up my Boat in a small convenient Creek fit for my Purpose, and, taking my Gun &c. I made the best of my Way to my Bow where I again laid me down to rest; but it was not long before I was surprized with a Voice, which called, Robin Crusoe, poor Robin Crusoe! where have you been, poor Robin Crusoe? Upon which I started up in a great Confusion, and, casting my Eyes round, I saw my Parrot sitting upon the Hedge; and then I knew it was she that called me, but was strangely surprized how the Creature came there, and why it should fix upon that Place above the Rest. The Bird came to me as soon as I called it, and perched upon my Finger, as usual, and seemed to signify a great Deal of Joy for my Return.

This Voyage had cured me of a great Deal of my rambling Inclination; insomuch that I began to lay aside all Hopes of Deliverance; so I led a retired Life, and in a very contented Manner passed away near twelve Months, spending my Time in making Instruments, and doing such Things as I found were most absolutely necessary, both for my present and future Subsistence.

My next Consideration was, my Powder growing short, what I should do to kill the Goats and Fowls to live upon: I had Abundance of Contrivances in my Head to try to catch the Goats alive, particularly the she Goats with Young, and at length I had my Desire; for, making Pit-falls, and baiting them with some of my Corn, one Morning I found in one of them an old he Goat, and in the other three young ones, one Male and two Females.

The old one was too strong for me, and I could not tell how to master him; but the Kids I made Shift to get to my Habitation. It was some Time before I could make them feed, but after they had for some Time been kept without Food, and I threw them some fresh Corn, and gave them some Water, their Stomachs came to them. And now my next Care was to find them Pasture, and secure them so that they might not run away ; all which I at last effected ; and, withal, by my well using these poor Creatures, I had made them so tame and familiar, that they would follow me, and eat Corn out of my Hand. This having answered my Ends, I think, in about eighteen Months Time, I had got a Flock of about twelve ; and in less than two Years forty-three ; and now I was not only provided with Goat's Flesh, but with Milk also, which was another Blessing I had little Reason to expect.

Being thus happy, and having almost forgot all Hopes of Liberty, I lived as well as the Nature of my Condition could possibly allow : and, indeed, it was a very diverting Sight to see me sit in State at my Dinner, all alone by myself, like a King ; and it would have been a very pleasant Object to have seen me in my Goat-skin Dress, and other suitable Habilliments.

My chief Concern now was about my Boat, which I was extremely unwilling to lose, it having cost me so much hard Labour : I went by Land to the Place where I left it, but found there was no Way to bring it off, without running the same Risque I was so lately exposed to, which I thought too dangerous for a second Experiment, and therefore I resolved upon another Expedient, which was to make another Canoe, and leave it on the other Side of the Island.

And here I think it may not be improper to inform the Reader that I had two Plantations in the Island ; the first was my little Fort, or Castle, where I had made several Improvements ; and the second was my Bower, or Country-Seat, where were my Grapes, and the Enclosures for my Goats, and several other Conveniences, that made it a very pleasant and agreeable Retirement.

To this Place it was that I used to go often to view my Goats. And now I shall relate a Thing that gave me the most Disquiet of any Thing that I had met with since my first coming into the Island.

It may well be supposed that, after I had been so long in this desolate Part of the World, Nothing could have been more amazing than to have seen any human Creature; but, one Day, as I was going to my Boat, as usual, I perceived, on the Sand, the Print of a Man's naked Foot; and, had I seen an Apparition, I could not have been more terrified. I looked round me on all Sides, but could not hear or see any Thing; I observed the Trampings, and was convinced, from all Signs, that some Foot had been there: and, in the deepest Confusion, I returned back to my Habitation.

That Night I never closed my Eyes, and was full of the most dismal Apprehensions that I ever had in all my Life. Sometimes I had the Folly to think it must be the Devil; at other Times I thought it rather some Savage, that the Current had driven in, and, not liking the Place, was secretly gone off to Sea again. Happy was I, in my Thoughts, that none of the Savages had seen me; and yet, at the same Time, I was exceedingly terrified lest they should have seen my Boat, and so come in great Numbers, and find me out, and devour me, and all my little Stock, that I had been so long in gathering. These Thoughts afflicted me extremely; and yet, after mature Consideration, I concluded it was my best Way to throw myself upon the Sovereign Governor of the World, and to submit intirely to his Mercy and Providence.

After a World of Fears and Apprehensions, for three Nights and Days, I ventured out of my Fortrefs; I milked my Goats, and, after I had put every Thing in Order, not without the greatest Consternation, I went again to the Shore to make my farther Observations; and, upon the Whole, concluded, that either the Island was inhabited, or that some Person had been on-shore, and that I might be surpris'd before I was aware.

This put several frightful Notions into my Head, insomuch that Sleep was an entire Stranger to me; my whole Thoughts being taken up on Nothing but my Preservation, I put my little Castle into the best Posture of Defence I was able, and placed all my Guns so that they might be serviceable if I should have Occasion to make Use of them.

I divided my Goats into several Parcels; ten She-Goats and two He-ones I put into one Part of the Island, and the other ten, with two He-ones, in another; and, whilst I was in Search of the latter, which was on the Western Part of the Island, I thought I discovered a Boat, but at too great a Distance to make out what she was. Being come to the Shore, upon the S. W. Part of the Island, I was convinced that they were Savages, seeing the Place covered over with the Skulls and mangled Limbs of human Bodies. I observed likewise a Sort of a Circle, in the Midst of which I perceived there had been a Fire; about this I conjectured these Wretches sat, and unnaturally sacrificed and devoured their Fellow-Creatures.

The Horror and Loathsomeness of this dreadful Spectacle confounded me so, that, though I was satisfied these Savages never came into the Part of the Island where I was, yet such an Abhorrence of them had seized me, that for two Years I confined myself to my Castle, my Country-Seat, and my Inclosures; and thus my Circumstances remained for some Time undisturbed. But still my grand Intention remained, which which was, to try if I could destroy some of those Savages, and save a Victim that I might afterwards make my Servant.

Many were my Projects and Contrivances to bring this about; at length I came to this settled Resolution, to lie privately in Ambush, in some convenient Place, and let fly upon them with my Guns first, and then with my Pistols, and Sword in Hand; and so much did this Proposal please my Fancy, that I fully resolved to put it in Practice the first Opportunity; and, accordingly, I soon found a Place convenient for my Purpose; but, at the same Time, I had several Checks of Conscience, and Reasonings with myself, concerning the Lawfulness and Justice of the Attempt; and, after a long Debate, I concluded to lay aside the Design.

Whilst I was cutting down some Wood one Day, to make Charcoal to dress my Meat and do the Family Necessaries, I perceived a very large Cavity; and, going towards it, I could perceive two large Eyes staring upon me; upon which I made Haste out, extremely terrified, not imagining what it could be that looked so frightfully: However, after I had recovered from my Surprise, I went again into the Cavity, resolving, at all Hazards, to see what it was; and, when I came near enough to discern it perfectly, what should it be, after all, but a monstrous He-Goat lying on the Ground, and gasping for Life, through mere old Age.

The Creature was not able to stand, and so I let him lie undisturbed, and employed myself in viewing the Place, and making Observations. At the farther Side of it I observed a Sort of an Entrance, but so low, as to oblige me to creep on my Hands and Knees to it: I had no Candle, and the Place was dark, and so I suspended my Enterprize till the next Day, when I returned with six large ones of my own making.

After I had passed the strait Passage, I found the Roof rose higher up; and, sure, when I got farther in, no Mortal ever saw a more beautiful Sight! The Walls and the Roof reflected a Thousand Lights from my two Candles; and, indeed, it seemed to me the most delightful Grotto I had ever heard of. In short, I could find no Fault but in the Entrance, and which I thought would be very necessary for my Defence and Security; therefore I determined to make the Place my principal Magazine; and, accordingly, I carried thither, with the utmost Expedition, some Arms and Ammunition, judging it impossible for me to be surprized by the Savages in that Fastness.

I think I was now in the 23d Year of my Reign, and tolerably easy in my Condition. By this Time my Parrot had learnt to talk English very well, and many diverting Hours we used to have together. My Dog died of old Age; and my Cats increased so fast, that I was often forced to destroy some of them, lest I should be over-run with their Numbers. I always kept two or three domestic Goats about me, and had several Fowls that built and bred about my Castle, so I wanted Nothing but an honest Companion or two to make me as happy as I could wish: But, alas! what unforeseen Events destroy the uncertain Enjoyments of human Happiness!

It was now December, the Time of my Harvest, when, going out one Morning early, there appeared to me from the Shore, about two Miles Distance from me, a flaming Light from that Part of the Island where I had before observed some Savages had been on my Side of the Water.

Terrified

Terrified with this unusual Spectacle, and being under dismal Apprehensions that these Savages would find me out, and destroy me, I went directly Home to my Castle, and shut myself up as fast as I could, and put myself into a Posture of Defence; and afterwards I got up to the Top of the Rock, and, viewing with my Prospective-Glass, I could discern no less than nine naked Savages sitting round a Fire, and eating (as I supposed) human Flesh, with their two Canoes hauled on Shore, waiting for the Tide to carry them back again.

Nothing can express my Detestation of so horrid a Sight: Especially, when I found they were gone, and I had been at the Place of Sacrifice, and saw the Limbs and Flesh of human Creatures lie torn and mangled upon the Ground: In short, my Indignation against them rose so high, that, let the Consequence be what it would, I determined to be revenged upon the first that should come thither, though I lost my Life in the Attempt.

I found afterwards that they did not come over to this Island very often; and, as near as I can remember, it was a Year or more before I saw any more of them. But, before I proceed farther, I have another Account that will deserve the Reader's Attention.

It was the 16th of May, according to my wooden Calendar, after a very terrible Storm, when I was alarmed with the Noise of a Gun, as fired from a Ship in Distress; upon which I immediately took my Glass, and went up to the Top of the Rock, where I had not been a Moment but a Flame of Fire gave Notice of another Gun; and then I was confirmed in my Opinion, that it could be Nothing less than a Ship in Distress; which, with my Glass, I soon discovered to be true; and that the Wreck was upon those hidden Rocks, where I was in great Danger of being lost in my Boat.

I made a Fire upon the Hill by Way of Signal, and they saw it, and answered it with several Guns. The Weather was very hazy, and so I could not, at that Time, discover either at what Distance the Ship lay, or what she was; but, the Weather clearing up, I saw a Ship cast away some Distance at Sea.

I had several Notions concerning them, as is natural in such Cases; but, considering seriously the Place where they were, and all other Circumstances, I could not conceive any Possibility but that they must be all lost; and, indeed, to the last Year of my being in this Island, I never knew of any that were saved out of this Ship; I only saw the Body of a Boy which was driven on Shore, but I could not discover by him of what Nation they were.

The Sea was now very calm, which tempted me to venture to the Wreck, not only in Hopes to get Something I wanted, but likewise, if there was any Body left alive in the Ship, to endeavour to save their Lives. This Resolution so far prevailed, that I went Home immediately, and got every Thing ready for the Voyage; and accordingly, after a great Deal of Labour, Hazard, and Difficulty, I at length got to the Wreck, which I beheld with the greatest Pity and Concern. By her Built I found she was a Spaniard, and had endured a terrible Conflict before she was lost.

When I was come near to her, I saw a Dog on-board, who no sooner saw me but he fell to yelping and howling, and I no sooner called to him, but the poor Creature jumped into the Sea, and swam to me, and I took him into the Boat almost famished. When I came into the Ship, the first Sight that I beheld was two drowned Men in the Arms of each other; I found found she was a rich Ship, and, as I had Reason to believe, bound Home from the Spanish West-Indies. What became of the Rest of the Sailors I could not tell, there being none of their Bodies on-board, besides the two beforementioned.

As I was rummaging 'about' her, I found several Things I wanted, viz. a Fire-Shovel and Tongs, two Brass Kettles, a Pot to make Chocolate, some Horns of fine glazed Powder, a Gridiron, and several other Necessaries. These I put on-board my Boat, together with two Chests and a Cask of Rum; and, after a great Deal of Toil and Difficulty, I got safe back to the Island.

I reposed myself that Night in the Boat, and, the next Day, landed my Cargoe, which I carried to my Grotto; and, having examined my Effects, I found in the two Chests several Things I wanted, particularly some Shirts and Handkerchiefs; I found also three Bags of Pieces of Eight; all which I would willingly have given for five or six Pairs of English Shoes and Stockings.

After I had stowed all this new Cargoe in my Cave, I made the best of my Way to my Castle, and found every Thing as I left it, so that I had Nothing to do but to repose myself, and take Care of my Domesticks. And now, wanting Nothing that was requisite for the Support of Life, I might have lived very quiet, had not the Apprehension of the Savages disturbed me; upon which Account I seldom went far abroad, if I did, it was to the Eastern Part of the Island, where I well knew they never came: And for two Years I lived in this anxious Condition, my Head being always full of Projects how I might get away from this desolate Place.

As I observed before, though I was tolerably secure against the Reach of Want, and had all the Diversion the Nature of the Island would allow, yet the Thoughts of my Deliverance were still uppermost, as the Reader will easily perceive by the following Relation, in which I shall give a short Account of the Schemes and Projects I made for my Escape.

As I lay in my Bed one Night in March, the 24th Year of my Solitude, I ran through all the Accounts of my Life, from my very first Remembrance to the present Time, and found all along that the Providence of God had been exceedingly kind and merciful to me, and, when I considered, more particularly, how many Dangers I had passed, it could not but make me devoutly thankful to my great Deliverer, without whose Assistance I must inevitably have perished.

After

After I had thus briefly debated with myself on my present and former Condition, I began next to consider the Nature of these Savages, and the Country that they inhabited, how far it was to the Place from whence they came, and what Boats they had to bring them over hither, and at the same Time had some Notions to go over to their Side, to see what Discoveries I could make.

I had Notions, that, if by any Method I could get upon the Continent, I might, in Time, meet with a Ship to carry me to Europe, for here I looked upon myself to be the most miserable Man living, and preferred even Death itself to my Stay in this desolate Island. Whilst my Thoughts were thus confused, I had no Notion of any Thing but my Voyage to the Continent; and, indeed, so much was I inflamed with these Notions, that I in a great Measure forgot my Duty to God, and was reduced almost to a State of Desperation; and, after many Thoughts and Strugglings in my Mind, I came at length to this Conclusion, viz. That the only probable Way I had to escape, was to get one of these Savages; which I could find no other Way to bring about, than by venturing my Life to save him from the Jaws of his Devourers, which I thought must inspire him with Gratitude to his Preserver.

These were my fixed Resolutions; but I think it was at least a Year and a Half before I could find an Opportunity of putting them in Execution. To the best of my Remembrance it was the 23d Day of April, early in the Morning, when I was surpris'd with the Sight of five Canoes, all on shore together, on my Side of the Island, and the Creatures that belonged to them all landed and out of Sight.

At first I thought all these Boats must bring too many to be attacked by one Person, and was in a mighty Confusion as to what was best to be done; however, being impatient to see Something of their Management, I took my Guns, and went secretly to the Top of the Hill, where, by the Help of my Prospective-Glass, I observed no less than thirty sitting round a Fire, and feasting upon what Meat they had dressed: What it was I could not distinguish; but they were all dancing around the Flames, and using many frightful and barbarous Gestures.

Whilst I was looking earnestly on these Wretches, I could discern them dragging two miserable Creatures out of one of their Boats. It was not long before I saw one of them knocked down, and three or four of them fell to cutting and mangling his Body, in Order to devour him, as they had done the former.

Whilst

Whilst the other miserable Creature stood expecting every Moment the Fate of his Companion, inspired with the Hopes of Life, he gave a sudden Start from them, and ran with great Swiftneſs towards my Cattle. I was under great Apprehenſions that he would fly to my Grove for Protection. I was glad to ſee he had the Heels of them, and, from his Swiftneſs, concluded he would preſently loſe Sight of them, and ſave his Life. There was a little Creek juſt before him, where I was afraid the poor Victim would be taken if he could not ſwim; but it happened that he ſwam very well and ſoon got over, and ran again with his former Strength and Swiftneſs. Two, of the three that followed him, ſwam over after him, but the other, that could not ſwim, returned back to his Companions. And now, or never, I thought it was my Time to procure a Savage for my Companion. Accordingly, with all the Speed I could, I came down from the Rock, took up my two Guns, reſolving to ſave the Victim if poſſible; and, in Order to it, came a nearer Way, and put myſelf between the Purſuers and the Purſued, beckoning to the latter to ſtand ſtill, who, you muſt imagine, was not a little ſurpriſed at me. The firſt Purſuer I knocked down with the Stock of my Piece, and the other, who I perceived was preparing his Bow and Arrow to ſhoot me, I let fly at, and killed him dead upon the Spot.

The poor frightened Indian was amazed to ſee the Fire and hear the Noiſe of the Gun; however, I made Signs to him to come to me, which at length he did, but not without a great Deal of Fear and Trembling, being afraid, I believe, I ſhould kill him too. I did all I could to convince him of his Miſtake, and at length ſo far convinced him, by the Signs I made him, that he came to me, and threw himſelf at my Feet, and took one of my Feet and put it upon his Head ; which was a Token, it seems, of his Resolution to be my Slave for ever ; upon which I took him up, made much of him, and encouraged him in the best Manner I could.
it

By this Time I saw that the Savage, I had knocked down, began to recover, and was sitting upright, which made my new Slave as much afraid as before, but I soon prevented his Fright, by presenting my Piece at him ; but my Savage opposed my shooting him, making a Sign to me to lend him my Sword, which hung by my Side, and no sooner had I granted his Request, but away he ran to his Enemy, and, very dexterously, at one Blow, cut off his Head ; and, as a Token of Triumph, brought it to me, together with my Sword, and laid it at my Feet.

The greatest Astonishment my new Servant was in, was, how I killed the Savage, at that Distance, without a Bow and Arrow ; and, to satisfy himself in that Matter, he made Signs to me to let him go and view the Body, which I granted ; after he had turned him, and viewed the Wound the Bullet had made in his Breast, he took up his Bow and Arrows, and came back to me again, making Signs to me to give him Leave to bury him, which, with my Consent, he performed with wonderful Dexterity.

When I perceived he had done, I called him away, and carried him directly to my Cave, where I gave him Victuals, and then pointed to him to lie down upon some Straw, and take a little Rest. He was a very handsome well-proportioned Fellow, and in all Respects the most beautiful Indian I ever saw.

I think he had not slept above an Hour, before he came out of the Cave to me, as I was milking my Goats, and again threw himself at my Feet, and put my other Foot upon his Head, as a farther Token that he intended to be my Slave for ever.

That

That Night we stayed in the Cave ; but, early the next Morning, I made Signs to him to rise and go with me ; and, withal, made him to understand that his Name was to be Friday, it being on that Day I saved his Life, and that I intended to give him some Cloaths to hide his Nakedness. As we passed by the Place where the Savages were buried, he pointed directly to the Graves, and let me know by his Gestures that he intended to dig them up and devour them, upon which I let him see I was extremely displeas'd at it, and made him come away, which he did with the greatest Reverence.

In our Way to the Castle, we went to the Top of a Hill to view if the Savages were gone, and, finding they were, we refresh'd ourselves for that Night, and the next Morning I resolv'd to arm myself, and take my Man with me, and go to view the Place where they committed their Barbarities. When we came upon the Spot, it is impossible to express the Horribleness of the Sight ! Here lay the Flesh and Entrails, and there the mangled Limbs, of human Creatures ; in short, it fill'd me with the greatest Horror and Detestation. Friday gave me to understand that there were three there sacrific'd, and, if I had not rescu'd him, he had been the fourth. I made him gather up the Fragments, and lay them in a Heap, and made a Fire upon them, and burnt them to Ashes ; and still I found my Man had a Hankering after some of the Flesh, which I resent'd with the utmost Abhorrence, and made him understand, that, if ever I found him guilty of any such Inhumanity, I would certainly shoot him.

After this we went to my Castle, where I cloath'd my Man as well as the Nature of the Place and my Circumstances would admit. He seem'd at first

first a little uneasy and awkward in his new Dress; but, after he had worn them four or five Days, he grew familiar with them, and seemed extremely well satisfied. Now my next Concern was, how I might lodge him well, and yet be easy myself; and, in Order to this, I erected him a little Tent between my two Fortifications, secured my Arms every Night, and made every Thing so safe, that it was impossible for me to be surprized; though I must at the same Time own there was no Need of these Cautions; for never Man was blest with a Servant that loved and obeyed him with greater Tenderness, Fidelity, and Affection; which endeared me to him extremely, and induced me to think how I might best acquit myself to him.

I had not been above two or three Days in my Castle, when I first proposed to bring him off from his barbarous Inclinations to human Flesh; in Order to which I used several Inticements; till the poor Creature, who had the most dutiful and tender Regard to every Thing I commanded him, and indeed did not want good Senie, was perfectly weaned from his vicious Inclination, and had as deep and fixed an Abhorrence of any such barbarous Proceedings as myself; he fell upon his Knees, made all Signs of his Aversion he possibly could, pronouncing many Things I did not understand; only, in the Main, I found that his only Apprehensions were from the Fear I should shoot him; for the Thoughts of the Gun, and the Manner of the Execution it did, were still in his Mind, and he could by no Means be reconciled to it; he would never so much as touch it with his Finger, for several Days, and, I believe, if I had not prevented it, he would have paid it a Sort of Adoration: He would go, as often as my Back was turned, and talk to it in his own Dialect; the Intent of which was, to desire it not to kill him.

I had

I had killed a Kid, which we brought Home, and the next Day I gave him some of the Flesh, both boiled and roasted, with which he was so much delighted, that he gave me Signs (which I perfectly understood) that whilst he lived he would never more eat any Man's Flesh on any Account: And now I began to think it high Time to set my Servant to work, especially considering I had now two Mouths to feed instead of one. I found him extraordinarily quick and handy in every Thing I set him about, and he had the Sense to make me understand that I had more Labour on my Hands on his Account than I had for myself, and that he would spare no Pains nor Diligence in any Thing I should command or direct; and, indeed, the Fellow's Honesty and simple Integrity grew so conspicuous, I really began to love him intirely; and, for his Part, I am well assured there was no Love lost. I had a Mind to know if he had any Inclination to his own Country; and, having taught him as much English as possible, I asked him several Questions, which he answered very pertinently; particularly, I asked concerning the Nature and Distance of his Country, and their Manner of fighting, &c. The Fellow had a very good natural Genius, and would often answer my Questions with very quick and surprizing Turns; and, when I spoke about Religion, he heard me with the greatest Reverence and Attention, and would often surprize me with important and unexpected Questions; and, in Truth, I spared no Pains to instruct him according to the best of my Knowledge. I asked him, who made him and all the World? As soon as he understood me, he answered, Old Benamuckee; but all that he could say of him was, that he was very old, much older than the Sea and Land, the Moon and Stars, and that he lived a great Way beyond them all.

When

When I had enquired into the Manner of serving their God, I proceeded, according to the best of my Knowledge, to instruct him in the Principles of the Christian Religion, and laid before him several of the chief Truths upon which it was grounded; to which he gave the greatest Attention, and would ask very pertinent Questions, by Way of Information: In short, I soon perceived this poor Creature every Day improved by my Instructions; and my Endeavours to instruct him were a great Help to myself, and brought those Things fresh into my Memory which the Length of Time had almost defaced; so I had the greatest Reason to bless Providence for sending him to me in this State of Solitude. His Company allayed the Thoughts of my Misery, and made my Habitation more comfortable than it had been ever since my first coming to the Island. It brought into my Mind daily Notions of Heaven and heavenly Things, and filled me with a secret Joy that I was brought into this Place, which I once thought the most miserable Part of the Universe.

By this Time Friday began to speak tolerable English, though a little broken. We conversed with great Familiarity; and I took a particular Pleasure to relate to him the several Accidents and Adventures of my Life. I soon made him understand that wonderful Mystery, as he conceived it, of the Gun-powder and Ball, and taught him to shoot, which he soon learnt in the greatest Perfection. I gave him a Knife, which he was very proud of; likewise a Belt, and a Hatchet, which he hung to his Girdle, which, with the Rest of his Accoutrements, made him look like Don Quixote, when he went to engage the Wind-mills. After this, I gave him a particular Description of Europe, and Old England, land, the Place of my Nativity ; above all the Rest, I also gave him an Account of my being shipwrecked, and carried him and shewed him the Ruins of the Ship's Boat, which, though it was almost rotten and fallen to Pieces, yet I could perceive he took particular Notice of ; which made me ask him the Reason why he pondered so much. O Master, (said he,) me see like Boat come to Place at my Nation. It presently came into my Mind, that this must be some European Boat that was forced in there by Stress of Weather, after the Loss of the Ship, which put me upon Enquiry, what Sort of a Boat it was, and what came in it ?

Friday replied, with great Warmth and Ardour, O Master, we sawe White Mans from drown: Upon which, I asked him if there were any White Mans, as he called them, in the Boat ? Yes, yes, (said he) the Boat full, very full, of White Mans: How many, Friday ? said I : Whereupon he numbered his Fingers, and counted seventeen. Then I asked him, what became of them all, and whether they lived or not. He replied, Yes, Master, they all live, they be live 'mong my Nation. Upon which it came into my Thoughts, that these must be the Crew that belonged to the Ship that was cast away upon my Island ; who, rather than be devoured in the Ocean, had committed themselves to Providence, and were driven on-shore among the wild Indians. The Notion I had of their Cruelties made me ask Friday how it came to pass they did not kill and eat them. No, no, said Friday, they not kill 'em, they make Brother with 'em: My Nation, t'other Nation, no eat Mans, but when Mans make War-Fight. As much as to say, that neither his nor any other Nation ever ate their Fellow-Creatures, but such as the Law of Arms allowed to be devoured, and they were only those whose Misfortune it was to be made Prisoners of War.
and

Some Time after this, upon a very clear Day, my Man and I went up to the Top of a very high Hill, on the East Side of the Island, from whence I had once before seen the Continent in America; I could not directly tell what was the Matter, for Friday fell to jumping and dancing as if he were mad; I asked him the Reason of his Joy. O Joy! said he, Glad! There see my Country, there my Nation, there lives White Mans all gether. Upon which I could not help thinking, but that, if he could by any Means get Home, he would forget all I had done for him, and perhaps bring his Countrymen into my Island to destroy me: But, to my Shame I speak it, my Jealousy was very ill-grounded, for the poor Fellow was of a quite different Disposition, and, as I found afterwards, would have freely lost his Life, rather than have left me, or done me the least Injury.

Soon after this, I asked him if he had not a Desire to go into his own Country? Yes, said he, me much O glad to be at my own Nation; me go, if you go, me no go, if you stay. I go, Friday, said I, what shalt I do there? He answered, O Master, you do great Deal much Good, you teachee all the wild Mans to be good tame Mans, you learn them sober, live good Life, to know God, and pray God. Alas! poor Friday, said I, that's out of my Power, neither will I venture among them: No, you shall go and leave me alone, as I was before I saved your Life.

Never was any Creature more Thunder-struck than Friday was at these Words, especially when I told him he would be at Liberty to go as soon as the Boat was ready to carry him; he put one of his Hatchets into my Hand, saying, Only kill Friday; Friday care not live long: But what must I kill you for?

for? (said I.) Ab! dear Master, what made you Friday save from eat a me up, so keep long Friday, make Friday love God, and not love Benamuckee, and now Friday send away, never see Friday more! When he spoke this, the Tears ran down so plentifully, that I had much ado to refrain from weeping myself; I comforted him in the best Manner I could; telling him, if he was willing to stay with me, I would never part with him as long as I lived.

In short, the Fellow's Honesty and sincere Behaviour soon convinced me of the Unreasonableness of my Jealousy, and he became more dear to me than ever. Indeed, I thought that, if ever I could get to the Continent, and join those white Men Friday had mentioned, it might be the Means to further my Escape; in Order to this Friday and I went into the Woods to look out a large Tree to build a Canoe, which we effected in above six Weeks, and with much Trouble and Pains got her into the Water. I was very well pleased at the Launching this little Man-of-War of mine, which Friday managed with great Dexterity, and assured me it was in all Points large enough to carry us over, and, if I thought proper, he was ready to venture with me.

I liked the Fellow's honest Proposal, but, at the same Time, I thought if I could procure a Mast and Sail it would be better; which, with the greatest Difficulty imaginable, in about three Months Time, I made a Shift to patch together; and, after that, I had my Man Friday to instruct in the Art of Navigation, which before he knew Nothing of.

I was now entered in the Twenty-seventh Year of my Reign, or rather of my Captivity, and kept the Anniversary of my Landing with greater Solemnity than ever, having received such repeated Signals
of

of the divine Favour, in my Deliverance, Preservation, and Prosperity.

I now wanted for Nothing, and yet my Mind was still intent upon my Deliverance; and, in Truth, I had a strong Impression upon me that I should not be another Year in this Island; but I still continued my Husbandry, and made the necessary Preparations for my future Subsistence. The Rain-Season coming on, we were forced to continue for the most Part within Doors, having first made all necessary Preparations for the Security and Safety of my new Boat, till the Month^s of November and December, at which Time I fully determined to sail over to the Continent. And, no sooner did it begin to draw near, but I began to make Preparations for my intended Expedition, and, in a Fortnight's Time, I proposed to open my little Dock, and let out the Boat for that Purpose.

One Morning, as I was busy in making Preparations for my Voyage, Friday, whom I had sent to the Sea-side to look for a Turtle, came running in a terrible Fright; says he, I have bad News: Yonder are three or four Canoes upon the Coast, and they come to look for poor Friday, and will eat you as well as me; and therefore we must resolve to fight for our Lives. Says Friday, trembling, Me will fight as well as I can; but I am afraid they are too many in Number for us; but I will obey your Orders, and lose the last Drop of my Blood for you.

Without farther Disputes, we fell to loading our Arms, and making every Thing ready for the Onset: When we had double-loaded them, and put every Thing in the best Posture that could be, I took my Prospective Glass, and went up to the Top of a Hill, to try what I could discover; and I soon perceived there were nineteen Savages, and three three Prisoners, which, I concluded, by their Manner of acting, were to be devoured.

This dismal and inhuman Spectacle filled me with the utmost Horror and Detestation, and the more so, as I saw a white Man, who, by their Actions and Preparations, I found was to be the next Sacrifice: This made me make all the Speed I could, having fully determined to deliver him or perish in the Attempt; so I gave Friday Orders to follow me, and to do every Thing he saw me do.

When we came to a proper Distance undiscovered, I gave the Word to Friday to fire, as I did the very same Moment. We took our Aim so well, that, between us, we killed four, and wounded three or four more. No man can imagine the Consternation and Confusion these Savages were in upon this unexpected Accident; however, not to give them any Respite, we took up some other Arms, and let fly a second Time, killed two more, and wounded several Others, which added so to their Confusion, that they ran yelling and howling about like mad Creatures. Friday (said I) take the charged Musket, and follow me; so, shewing ourselves to them, and at the same Time giving a great Shout, we went directly to the Victim, and immediately cut the Bands from his Hands and Legs, and, lifting him up, I asked him, in the Portuguese Language, what he was: He told me, in Latin, he was a Spaniard and a Christian; and, after returning the best Acknowledgments he could for his Deliverance, he was about to give an Account of his Misfortunes, but I prevented him, telling him, That would be better at another Time; and farther said, Signior, we will talk afterwards, but now our Business is fighting. I gave him a Dram and a Piece of Bread to refresh him, and then gave him a Sword and and Pistol, and bade him do what he could ; and, to give the Man his Due, no one could behave himself with greater Courage. In short, we so managed the Matter, that, of twenty-two Savages, not above three or four got into one of their Canoes, and those I resolved to pursue and endeavour to destroy too, if possible ; accordingly, I leaped into one of their Canoes, and ordered Friday to follow me ; but, I was no sooner got in, than I saw another poor Creature bound Hand and Foot for the Slaughter. I presently helped him up, but he was so faint and weak, that he could neither stand nor speak, but groaned sadly, thinking he was now to be sacrificed. I bade Friday speak to him, and assure him of his Deliverance. When he was a little recovered, and sat up in the Boat, and Friday began to hear him speak, and had looked upon a more fully, you cannot imagine the poor Friday's Transport; at length, when he had a little recovered himself, he told me it was his Father; and, in Truth, he gave such uncommon Testimonies of his Duty and Affection, that I must needs own I was very much affected with it.

the

In short, with a great Deal of Difficulty, we got both my new Guests Home to my Castle, whence I made them a handsome Tent, and treated them in the best Manner my Circumstances would allow.

And thus, like an absolute King, I governed my little Dominions; and, finding that my new Subjects were very weak, I ordered Friday to kill one of my Kids, and stewed and boiled the Flesh, and made them some very good Broth, and dined with them myself. After Dinner, I ordered Friday to go to the Field of Battle, and fetch Home the Arms; and then I bade Friday ask his Father whether he thought it possible for the Savages to out-ride the Storm, or, if they got Home, whether he thought they would not return in great Numbers, and endeavour to destroy us. His Answer was, That, if they did reach their own Country, which he hardly thought possible, yet the Strangeness of their being attacked would certainly make them tell the People that they were destroyed by Thunder and Lightning, and that whoever went into the Island would certainly be destroyed by the Hands of the Gods, and not of Men; and that the Island was enchanted; and that the Gods sent Fire from above to destroy all those that should presume to land in it.

This Account having freed ^{me} from my Apprehensions, and no Canoes appearing, I resolved to pursue my intended Voyage, Fridley's Father having assured me I might depend upon good Usage from the People of his Country. As to the Spaniard, I asked him his Opinion; he told me they were fourteen that were cast away upon the Island, and that they had a good Understanding with the Indians, but were in Want of Necessaries for the Support of human Life; and that, if I thought proper, he and the old Savage would go over first, and settle Matters in Order for our Reception; and at the same Time he told me, they would all swear Fidelity to me, and own me as their Leader.

Upon these Assurances, I resolved to send them over; but, when every Thing was ready, the Spaniard started this material Objection: You know, Sir, said he, I know the Length of your Stock, and though you may have enough for us that are now with you, yet, when you enlarge your Family, I am sensible it cannot be sufficient to support us long, and therefore my Advice is, to wait another Harvest, and in the mean Time prepare as much Ground as possible, whereby we may have Provisions sufficient to carry on our Design. This Advice I liked extremely, and from that Moment I always esteemed the Spaniard, and made him my Privy-Counsellor on all Occasions.

We all four went to work, and prepared as much Ground as would sow twenty-two Bushels of Barley and sixteen of Rice, which was all the Seed we had to spare: And at the same Time I took all the Care imaginable to increase and preserve my Goats, by shooting the wild Dams, and taking the young Kids, and putting them into the Enclosures, and took such other Measures, that, by the Blessing of God,

God, and our Industry, after Harvest, we had Provisions to victual a Ship for any Part of America.

The principal Occasion being thus answered, I gave my two Ambassadors a Musket each, with eight Charges of Powder and Ball, with Provisions fit for the Expedition, and away I sent them; they had not been gone a Fortnight, but I began to grow impatient for their Return. Whilst my Thoughts were perpetually taken up with the Expectation of them, a very strange Accident happened, which was first discovered by my Man Friday; who one Morning came running unto me, crying out, They are come, they are come. Upon which I jumped from my Bed, and looked towards the Sea. I perceived a Boat about a League and a Half Distance, standing directly in for the Shore. I soon found that these were none of the Company that I expected; for, by the Help of my Glafs, I found that this Boat must belong to some Ship, which, by casting my Eyes about, I plainly discovered lying at Anchor at some Distance at Sea; which, by the Fashion of her Long-Boat, &c. I concluded must be an English Vessel.

Great were my Transports upon this unexpected Sight, which brought into my Mind fresh Notions of Deliverance; and yet I had some cautionary Thoughts, which, I confess, were of Use to me afterwards. It was not long before I saw the Boat approach the Shore, and then I was fully convinced that they were English. I saw four of them leap upon

upon the Shore, and take three out with them, that looked like Prisoners, who, I observed, made passionate Gestures of Intreaty; and, not knowing what the Meaning might be, I beckoned to Friday, who was near me, to go to the Top of the Mountain, and make what Discoveries he could; when in a little While returning back, O Master, (said he,) you see English Mans eat Prisoners as well as Savage Mans! But of this I soon convinced him to the contrary; and yet I could not help thinking but there must be Something very barbarous in Hand. I could not perceive that they had any Fire-Arms, but rather that they were preparing to kill their three Companions with their Swords; and now it was I lamented my Want of Power to preserve them. However, to my great Satisfaction, I found that they turned them up into the desolate Island, as they thought, to be either starved or devoured by wild Beasts, and then rambled about the Wood to make Observations till the Tide was gone, and the Boat was a-ground.

In short, I considered what Sort of Men I had now to deal with, and therefore resolved to act with all the Caution imaginable, and so concluded it was best not to make any Attempt till it grew dark; but, the Day being excessively hot, I concluded the Sailors were of Course laid in the Shade to sleep; and, perceiving the three poor disconsolate Creatures sitting under a Tree, at some small Distance from me, I made no more to do, but went up to them, asking them, in the Spanish Tongue, What they were? At which they started up, and, being surprized at the Odaness of my Drets, they began to avoid me; but I called to them; in English, Do not be afraid, for you have a Friend nearer to you than you expect; tell me your Condition, and, if it be in my Power, I will serve you faithfully. Sir, (said one of them,) the Story is too long at present: I was Master of that Ship that lies yonder at Anchor; my Men having mutinied, it is a Favour they have put this Passenger, my Mate, and I, on-shore on this Island without murdering us, though we have no Prospect but to perish here, for Want of the Necessaries of Life. Have they any Fire-Arms? said I. Only two Fuzees, replied he, and one of them is now left in the Boat; and, if the two desperate Rogues that are with them could be taken, I am pretty well assured the Rest would return to their Duty. Well, said I, let us retire a little farther under the Covering of the Wood, and we will talk farther; and there it was I made my Conditions to them, which they very gratefully and honestly performed.

It was not long before we came to a Resolution to go and attack the Villains; the two Men fired on them, and killed one of the Captain's greatest Enemies, and wounded another; the Rest cried out for Mercy, which was granted them, upon Condition they would swear to be true to him, in helping him to recover his Ship, which they all promised to do in a so'lemn Manner; however, I advised the Captain to keep them bound, and then our next Care was to secure the Boat, without which it was impossible to reach the Ship.

To shorten the Relation as much as possible, we concerted all our Measures so well, that, at last, the Ship was recovered according to our Wish; and now there remained Nothing but the Disposal of the Prisoners, the most dangerous of which we resolved to leave on the Island. I gave them Arms, and all the Necessaries I had in my Castle; and, telling them all my whole Story, I charged them to be kind to the Spaniards that I had sent for over. They promised me very fair, and so I informed them of every Thing necessary for their Subsistence; so, taking with me my Man Friday, my Money, my Parrot, &c. I went on-board, where the Captain treated me as his Deliverer, and behaved himself to me with the utmost Gratitude and Civility. Upon the 12th of December, 1686, we set Sail, and landed in England the 11th of June, 1687, after I had been absent from my native Country upwards of thirty five Years.

After my Arrival, and I had a little refreshed myself, I began to enquire into the State of my Affairs: I found my first Captain's Widow alive, but in very mean Circumstances. Soon after, I went into Yorkshire, where I found my Family in general either dead or lost, so that I knew not where to find them. I found that there was no Provision made for me;

upon which I took my Man Friday, and went to Lisbon, in Order to find the Portuguese Captain, who took me on-board on the Coast of Africa; and to learn, from him, what was become of my Plantation at the Brafsils. According to my Wish, after some little Search, I found him out, and he gave me a very satisfactory Account of all Matters, more particularly of my Plantation in the Brafsils; which had been so happily managed in my Absence, that, beyond my Expectation, I found myself worth 4000*l.* Sterling; with which, as soon as possible, I resolved to make the best of my Way to England; and, by the Advice of the Captain, I was persuaded to go by Land, which had like to have proved fatal to me and all that were in my Company; for, the Snows being fallen, the Wolves

Wolves and Bears were driven out of the Woods, and, though there were more than 20 of us together, they set upon us many Times, and, indeed, it was not without the greatest Hazard and Difficulty we preserved ourselves from being devoured, the particular Relation of which would be too long to trouble the Reader with.

In our farther Passage, through France, we met with Nothing uncommon or remarkable; we got safe to Paris, and, after a short Stay there, we went to Calais, and landed at Dover the 14th of January, in a very cold Season.

When I came to London, I found my Bills of Exchange all arrived, and the Money ready to be paid at Sight, which when I had received, it came into my Mind to return to Lisbon, and from thence to the Brazils, to look after my Plantation: but, upon second Thoughts, I concluded it best to sell it, and on this Account I thought it proper to write to my Correspondent at Lisbon, and desire his Advice and Assistance, who readily gave me his Promise to do all he could for me; and, in Truth, as I afterwards found, he acquitted himself to me in every Particular with the greatest Justice and Integrity.

In short, he sold my Estate for me to the best Advantage, and remitted to me for it Bills for three Hundred and twenty Pieces of Eight, a Sum much greater than I expected. And now I began to think it high Time to settle myself, Providence having made such a plentiful Provision for me, that I wanted Nothing to make myself as happy as I could wish.

Having cast my Anchor, and for the present bid Adieu to all foreign Adventures, I had no other Care or Concern upon me but the Education of my Brother's two Sons; one of them I bred a Gentleman, and the other I bred an able Sailor; and soon afterwards I married a virtuous young Gentlewoman, of a good Family, by whom I had two Sons and a Daughter; but, she dying, I grew disconsolate and melancholy, and, at the Instigation of my Nephew, resolved I would once more make a Voyage to the East-Indies, which I did in the Year 1689, and in my Passage visited my Island. A full, and particular Account of which I intend shall be the Subject of the second and third Volumes of my Narrative.

F A R T H E R
A D V E N T U R E S
O F
R O B I N S O N C R U S O E .

V O L . II .

Containing a full A C C O U N T of his Travels and remarkable Transactions both by Sea and Land.

MY new Kingdom ran continually in my Mind, and took up my Thoughts Day and Night, insomuch that my Wife took Notice of it, and would often ask me the Reason of my extraordinary Thoughtfulness, supposing my Marriage with her might be the Cause. Her tender and endearing Expressions, together with the Concern I had for the Preservation of my Family, at length brought me to a Resolution to settle myself in some fixed Way of Living; accordingly, I bought a little Farm in Bedfordshire, and soon provided me a Stock, with all other Implements fit to manage it to the best Advantage. In this rural Retirement I began to think myself as happy as I could wish, when, on-a-sudden, all my Happiness was destroyed by the unexpected Death of my Wife.

Her Death gave me a Sort of Contempt of the World, and filled me full of different Thoughts and Inclinations. My Country Life grew burthensome to me: and, in short, I left my Farm, left off House-keeping, and, in a few Months after, returned to London; but there I could find Nothing to entertain me and divert my Melancholy. It was now the Beginning of the Year 1693, when my Nephew, whom I had bred up to the Sea, was returned from his Voyage, Captain of the Ship he went out in; who, coming to me one Morning, told me, It was proposed to him by some Merchants to make a Voyage to the East-Indies, and, if I would go, he would undertake to land me upon my Island, that I might have an Opportunity to enquire into the State of my new Kingdom.

Just before he came to me, it came into my Thoughts to get a Patent, and fill my Island with Inhabitants. What Devil, said I, sent you hither with this Message? And, though I liked the Motion, yet I would not let him know it at first; however, after a little Pause, I told him, if he would set me down, and call for me at his Return, I would certainly go with him. As to calling for me as he came back, he told me it was impracticable. But, said he, I will tell you what we can do; we may have a Sloop ready framed on-board, which we may easily put together at any Time, and you may return at your Pleasure.

I was not long in forming my Resolutions, but, contrary to the Advice of all my Friends, I fully determined to undertake the Voyage; and, in Order to it, I made my Will, and put all my Affairs in the best Posture I could possibly, and so, with my trusty Servant Friday, in the Beginning of January, 1694, I went

I went on-board, and took with me several Artificers, with a good Cargoe, for the better stocking of my Island.

We had not been long out at Sea, but we were overtaken by a Storm, which drove us upon the Coast of Ireland, as far as Galway, where we were obliged to stay twenty Days for a Wind. On the 5th of February, the Wind presented, and we had a very good Gale for several Days. On the 20th, in the Evening, the Mate called out, That he saw a Flash of Fire, and heard a Gun; upon which we all ran to the Quarter-deck, from whence, at a Distance, we saw a terrible Fire, which, from our Reckoning, we concluded could be no other than a Ship that had taken Fire at Sea, and that it could not be far off by

by the Report of the Gun, which we heard several Times. We made to it with all our Sail, and soon perceived it was a great Ship burning in the Middle of the Sea; I immediately ordered five Guns to be fired, that the poor people might perceive that there was Deliverance at Hand, who consequently might risk their Lives in their Boats; nor was it long before the Ship blew up.

We hung out our Lanthorns, and, about eight in the Morning, when it began to be light, we saw two Boats making towards us, and we made a Signal for them to come on-board, and took them all up, being, Men, Women, and Children, in all sixty-four. It was a French Ship of 300 Tons, bound from Canada, and, by the Negligence of the Steersman, it was set on Fire in the Steerage; so that, in all Probability, if Providence had not sent us to their Assistance, they had every Soul perished.

Never were People, certainly, so overjoyed as these poor Creatures were. Among the Passengers there were two Priests, an old one and a young one; the old one was a stupid Fellow, but the young one was a very modest fine Gentleman. After their Surprise was pretty well over, and they had been refreshed in the best Manner our Ship would allow, the Captain and one of the Priests desired to speak with me, and offered us the Money and Jewels they had saved, which I refused, telling them, Our Business was to save them, and not plunder them. They told us, that then all that they had to desire of us was, to set them on-shore somewhere in our Passage. As to landing, we told them, that, being bound to the East-Indies, we could not do that without changing our Course, and that we could not justify; but we would carry them till we met with a Ship bound either to England or France, that would take them on-board; however, our Provisions beginning to fall short, we resolv'd to land them at Newfoundland, which was not much out of our Way: and accordingly, as we propos'd, in a Week's Time we came to the Banks of Newfoundland, where they hired a Bark to carry the all but the young Priest and two or three others, who chose to go with us.
that

Now, directing our Course twenty Days after we met with that gave us a fresh Opportunity. In the Latitude of 45 deg. being towards us that brought a Gun in Token

soon came up
Ship of Bristol. had been driven cane. They had and were almost
ing eaten Nothing

In this Ship were man, her Son, and in the most miserable
The Woman died,
scarcely that we preserv'd
whom, at their earnest plied the Ship with what on-board our own Ship. We 19; but, passing by some little late what is most remarkable relating to the Kingdom, to which I was now drawing nigh. I with no small Trouble that we got to the South Side of my Island; however, at last, we came to an Anchor at the Mouth of the little Creek, and then I soon saw my old Castle, and knew perfectly where I was.

When

When I was certain of the Place, I called to Friday, and asked him if he knew where he was? But, when he looked a little, he clapped his Hands, crying, O Joy! O there! O yes! O there! Me see! There much Men! and there! and fell to dancing as if he were mad.

English Antient was spread, and we fired our Guns, to let them know we were the white Flag, and so, with my Man Friday, I went on-board to be the first Man I saw, but I had saved; and Friday, in a sudden Instance, ran to him with a Pistol, and faced him with exposed to shoot at my Foot on-board, but the faithful Spaniard, who was near me; he did not stir, but had hinted to him that he should not behave himself so rashly towards me by the Hand, but to come and take Possession of the Ship. I found they had been in great Distress. I asked him frequently how they had so readily answered me, and how great a Confusion they had been in, but he had no designed to have murdered me. While we were talking, the Man whom I had saved, attended with eleven more. These, I perceived were of those that owe their Lives to my Goodness. And, after he had made them sensible who I was, they all saluted me in a very grateful and handsome Manner.

Before I relate what happened in the Island, as it was related by the Spaniard, my Governor, I must not omit a Story which I omitted in my former mer Narrative. Just before we weighed Anchor, there happened a Quarrel on-board, which, by the Care of the Captain, was timely prevented, though not without some Difficulty; and, indeed, so far it proceeded, that two Fellows, that had been the Ring-leaders, found Means, in the Night, to get some Arms, and the Ship's Boat, and got away to the Island, and joined their Brother Rogues; so that now there were five English in the Island, which, as the Spaniard reports in the following Narration, was the Cause of great Disorder and Confusion amongst them.

The Spaniard's Relation of what happened in the Island from my Departure till my second Landing.

YOU may remember, Sir, you sent me on a Voyage; and, indeed, I was not a little surprized to find, at my Return, that you had left us. We had a very good Passage; and, indeed my Countrymen were overjoyed to find I had so miraculously escaped; and, when I had shewed the Arms and Ammunition which I had brought, they were transported to the highest Degree. After a little Stay, we got what we could from the Savages, made bold with two of their Canoes, and so came all of us over to the Island; where we had no sooner landed, but we found the Englishmen had quarrelled with one another, and had attempted to murder and destroy their Fellows, and were often very near putting their wicked Practices in Execution.

One Day it happened, that, as two of my Spaniards were in the Wood, one of the soberest of the Englishmen came up to them; and made heavy Complaints how cruelly they were used by their Countrymen, and that, if we did not take them under our Protection and give them Assistance, they must inevitably be starved and undone. When they came to Supper, one of the Spaniards, in a gentle and friendly Manner, began to reprimand the mutinous Englishmen: That it was a great Pity their Countrymen should perish, and therefore intreated them to suffer their Countrymen to procure their Subsistence without farther Disturbance; to which they replied, Let them starve and be damned, for the Island is ours, and, if they will not work for us, they shall have no Share in it. Come, Jack, (said Atkins,) who shall dare to build in our Dominions, without our Consent? And, as we afterwards found out, they had certainly murdered them, if they had not been prevented: However, they pulled down their Huts, and did them all the Damage they possibly could. When they had done this Villainy, they came back to the Castle, boasting of what they had done; when one, taking hold of a Spaniard's Hat, twirled it round, saying, And you, Signior Jack Spaniard, shall have the same Sauce, if you do not mend your Manners. This Quarrel in a short Time grew so high, that, if we had not timely interposed and taken away their Arms, in all Probability there had been Murder.
the

These wicked Fellows, perceiving that they had made all of us their Enemies, began to relent, and to beg for their Arms, but this we positively refused, which made them so mad and desperate, that they left us in the greatest Passion imaginable. They were hardly gone but their two Countrymen came to us with their Complaints, telling us they were ruined; and truly, Sir, we could not help thinking it very hard, that nineteen of us should, from Time to Time, be bullied and insulted by three such notorious Villains.

It was with some Difficulty we persuaded their two Countrymen from pursuing and killing them with their Fire-Arms, but, upon our promising that they should have Justice done them, they desisted. About five Days after, being almost starved, they came to us in a very submissive Manner, and begged heartily to have their Arms restored, which, upon certain Conditions, we at last granted. But so great was their Villainy, that there had not past above three Days but they began their old Trade again.

And

And now it was that an Accident happened, that not only obliged us to lay aside all private Animofities, but likewise to provide for our mutual Security.

One Night, as I lay in my Bed, I was disturbed with unufual Fears and Apprehenfions. I got up, and related the Matter to one of my Spanifh Friends, who answered, Such Hints were not to be flighted; and advised me to look out carefully; adding, That certainly there was some Mifchief upon the Stocks. Accordingly, we went up to the Top of the Mountain, where we difcovered a Light, and heard the Voices of feveral Men, which terrified us exceedingly. We could not tell what to conjecture, and therefore fent out old Friday as a Spy, to try if he could learn who, and from whence, they were; he returned in a very fhort Time, and brought us Word, That they were two different Parties, of different Nations; and that, after a bloody Battle, they had landed there, by mere Chance, in Order to devour their Prifoners; and that he believed, as foon as it was light, a bloody Battle would enfue. Old Friday had hardly ended his Relation, but an unufual Noife gave us to underftand that the Engagement was begun; and Nothing could be more bloody and obftinate, nor Men of more invincible Spirits, nor more active and ready in their Way of Fighting.

We were undoubtedly, Sir, in a great Confternation, left they fhould run into our Grove, and deftroy what we had, and fo refolved to put ourfelves upon our Defence, and fhoot the firft that fhould approach; and, as we apprehended, fo it happened; for three of the Army that was vanquifhed came directly to the Place for Shelter: But thefe I would not fuffer to be flain, but had them surprized and taken alive; and, in Truth, they all proved very excellent Servants, and were of great Ufe to us after-wards.

wards. The two Parties being gone off, and the Coast clear, we went to the Place of Battle, where we found two-and-thirty dead upon the Spot, with several Bows and Arrows, and other Sorts of Weapons, which I ordered to be carefully picked up and carried into our Armoury.

This dismal Spectacle had that Effect upon the three troublesome Englishmen, that much of their turbulent Temper began to abate, and they began to be good Friends, and to think unanimously what was best to be done for our mutual Security and Preservation. And, accordingly, all Hands were at Work to strengthen the Fortifications of our Castle, and provide a proper Security for all our Provisions; and, indeed, we did both with all the Caution that the Nature

Nature of our Circumstances would allow. And thus for two Years we lived in a very comfortable Retirement, having neither seen or heard any Thing of the Savages for all that Time.

But now there happened another Quarrel, which might have proved of very bad Consequence, if it had not been prevented in Time. The three wicked Englishmen being the Aggressors, I ordered them to be disarmed, and left the Case to be determined by the other two Englishmen, who sentenced them to be hanged, alledging, among other Things, that they had a Design to murder us, and only deferred it till a proper Opportunity; upon which I asked Atkins, who was the Ringleader, what we had done to them to deserve to be murdered, and he had to say for himself, why we should not immediately kill him, who had formed such a villainous Design to murder us? In Truth, the Englishmen pressed very hard to hang one of them for an Example to the Others; but this I would by no Means consent to, upon the Consideration that I owed my Life to an Englishman, to you, Sir, my only Preserver; however, to put it out of their Power to do us any farther Mischief, we determined, that, for the Future, they should have no Arms of any Sort; and that, if they did again attempt to give the Society any Manner of Disturbance, then we would immediately shoot them like wild Beasts. After this I ordered them some Provision for their present Subsistence, and appointed them a Place in a remote Part of the Island, where they might plant, and make what Improvements they thought proper.

They had lived six Months in this separate Station, and had got in their first Harvest; which, that Season, was but very small, as they were naturally not only very idle, but had every Thing to begin a-new,

a new, and, what was worse, were but very indifferent Workmen at the best. These Fellows, growing desperate and weary of working, took a new Whim into their Heads, which might have been of fatal Consequence. Nothing would serve them, but they must needs make a Voyage to the Continent, to try if they could seize some of those Savages, and make them Slaves to do their Drudgery; and, indeed, the Project was not so preposterous, if they had not been actuated by wicked Notions and Designs.

One Morning they came to their Limits, desiring to speak with us; which being granted, they told us they were tired of that State of Life, and, if we would give them one of our Canoes, they would go and seek their Fortunes abroad, and never trouble us more. You may be sure, Sir, we were not a little glad to be freed from such troublesome Companions; however, we represented the Danger of it; but, finding Nothing would change their Resolution, we consented they should have one of our Canoes, and at the same Time gave them some Fire-Arms, Ammunition, and Provision; and, as soon as they had fitted out their Boat, they merrily sailed away, the Spaniards at the same Time calling after them and wishing them a good Voyage. And, in Truth, Nothing could be farther from our Thoughts, than the Possibility of seeing them any more; yet, scarcely a Month had passed, but one of our Englishmen, being abroad at Work, saw three Men well armed coming towards him; upon which, away he flies to bring us Intelligence, telling us, We were all undone, for there were Men upon the Island that were not Savages! While we were considering the Event, up came the three Englishmen, whom we presently knew by their Voices; and and then our Wonder ceased. Our next Enquiry was into the Nature and Manner of their Voyage, and the Reason of their so speedy Return; of all which one of them gave the following Relation:

After two Days Sail, we reached Land; but, finding the Inhabitants Savages, and coming with their Bows and Arrows to give us an unwelcome Reception, we thought it proper to make the best of our Way, steering Northward. In our Passage we discovered several little Islands which seemed to be inhabited; at one of which we resolved to go on-shore at all Hazards; which accordingly we did, at one that lay most to the West; here we found the Natives very courteous to us, giving us what they could procure. Among these hospitable Indians we staid several Days, enquiring by Signs what Nations lay near them, and were informed that there were several savage Nations that lay nigh to them, that were accustomed to eat Mankind, but, for their Parts, they were not accustomed to eat such Sort of Diet, except such as they took in Battle. We enquired how long it was since they had had a Battle, and whether they had any Prisoners; to which they made Answer, by their Signs, that it was about two Months, and their King had now two hundred Prisoners, which he reserved for the Slaughter. Mighty desirous we were to see those Prisoners; which they mistook, and thought we wanted some for our own Use, and made Signs, that, at the next Rising of the Sun, we should have some; and, accordingly, at the very Time they brought us eleven Men and five Women, just as Cows and Oxen are brought to a Sea-port Town; a Sight that gave us all a great Deal of Horror, and what to do we could not tell; to refuse them, we knew would be an unpardonable

Affront,

ROBINSON CRUSOE.

Affront, and to dispose of them we knew not how. However, we resolv'd to accept of them, and gave them in Return a few Fishes that we had in the Canoe; so, taking our Leave, we sail'd to the next Island, where we set eight of the Men at Liberty; with the Rest we made the best of our Way to our Island; and, though we treated them all as well as we could, we could by no Means convince them, but that they were to be killed and devoured.

Thus, Sir, ended the Narrative of these three Desperadoes; whereupon I asked him where their new Family was, chusing to see them; they told me, they were at their Huts; so we all went to see them.

When we came to the Hut, we found three well-proportioned Men, and five Women, all naked and bound, four of them might be from twenty-four to forty, but the other was a comely Maiden of about seventeen; they were all very agreeable, and their Behaviour seem'd to be very modest. Their naked Appearance, with the Misery of their Condition, was no very agreeable Sight. I order'd Friday's Father to go try if he could learn any Thing from them, and, if he could make them understand him, to assure them that they should not be sacrificed; but they not being of his Nation, he could only make one of the Women understand, and that was partly by Signs; when they were told by the woman, their Interpreter, that they were not to be killed, no one can express their strange Gestures, by which they expressed their Joy, and, when they were asked whether they were willing to be Servants, they made joyful Signs to express their Readiness.

But now, Sir, having Women among us, which I thought might some Time occasion Quarrels, I asked the three Englishmen, how they propos'd to dispose of their Families; adding, that I was not going to lay any Restraint on them, only I would desire that they would take each one; and, after they had chosen which they had a Mind to, no other Man should presume to touch her. Well, to this they all agreed; and so they concluded to draw Lots for the Choice, which, beyond Expectation, they did with Regularity and Exactness. The only Thing that is to be observed, is, that the poor Women (till old Friday convinced them to the contrary) were under terrible Apprehensions that, as the English took them away as their Lots directed, they were immediately to be murdered.

But these Frights and Terrors being removed, the English, with their new Wives, went to work, and in a very short Time had finished several Huts proper for their living.

And now, Sir, I lay before you a Scene quite different from any Thing that has been related. One Morning, very early, there came five Canoes of Indians on shore, on their old Account of devouring their Prisoners; all that we could do was to lie concealed till their bloody Ceremony was over, and to take proper Measures to defend ourselves in Case of Need. But, notwithstanding all our Cautions, there happened an unhappy Disaster, that had like to have occasioned the utter Desolation of the Island; for, after the Savages were gone off, my Spaniards and I looking out to make Observations, we found three Savages that had got themselves lying fast asleep upon the Ground.

What to do with them we could not tell; to murder them we thought would not be justifiable according to the Law of Christianity, having no previous Quarrel with them; at last we thought it adviseable to secure them alive, and set them about some Work or other, till we could dispose of them; and accordingly we took them Prisoners, and carried them first to our Castle, and then to the two English, who soon found found them Employment; but, for Want of keeping a strict Guard over them, one of them got away into the Woods, and we not heard of for several Days.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.

came on; one of them was the Run-away, who had been the Cause of this Mischiefe; and he they resolv'd should be the first that suffered, let what would be the Consequence; and accordingly, as was concerted, the first let fly; and indeed he took his Aim so well that he killed the foremost outright, shot the Run-away through the Body, and wounded the third.

Sad and dreadful was the Out-cry the wounded Indiant made, being quite insensible from whence their sudden Destruction came, and, as we were inform'd, believed that they were destroyed by Thunder and Lightning, having never before heard or seen any Thing like a Gun. Whilst they were in this Consternation, the Englishmen had Time to new-load load their Guns, and, firing both together upon another Party of five, who were standing by the tw they had wounded, they fell to the Ground as if they had been killed; upon which the two Englismen went to them, without charging their Guns, which was a very wrong Step; for, when they were come up, they found four of them alive, two slightly wounded, and one not at all. Upon which they were forced to take the But-end of their Muskets, and knock them on the Head, and took him that was not wounded and bound him, and laid him at the Foot of a Tree hard by, and then made all the Haste they could towards the Cave to see if all was well there; and, finding every Thing safe, they came back to the Tree where they left the Indian bound, and found, to their great Surprise, he was gone. Now they were in greater Fear and Confusion than before; but, while they were considering sidering what was proper to do, seven Spaniards came up to them, bringing with them that very Indian the Englishmen had left bound under the Tree, whom the Spaniards had released in their Way.

This great Reinforcement so much encouraged the two Englishmen, and so great was their Indignation for the Loss of their Huts, that they could stay no longer; but, taking the Spaniards with them, all well armed, away they went in Pursuit of the Rest of the Savages; but, from a rising Ground, they perceived that they were got on-board their Canoes, and were gone out to Sea, too far to be come at, which gave them new Matter for Fear and Apprehension, lest they should go Home directly, and inform their Brethren of all that had happened, and incite them to come over with a greater Power, and destroy the whole Island. And, as we judged, so it happened; for, in less than seven Months, they came over with twenty-five Canoes, and landed upon us with two Hundred and fifty Men, all well armed with Bows and Arrows and other formidable Weapons.

You may imagine, Sir, we were in no small Consternation, upon the Approach of these unwelcome Guests; nor were we wanting to make the best Preparation we could to defend ourselves; we armed our faithful Slaves in the best Manner we could, nor would our Women be persuaded from fighting along with us, as they resolved to conquer or die with their Husbands, whom they now loved with the greatest Tenderness and Passion.

Of this little Army I was Commander in Chief; and Will. Atkins, whom I knew to be a Fellow of invincible Courage, I appointed for my Lieutenant-General, and gave him six choice Men, well armed, to command as a separate Body. In a short Time the Fight began on Atkins's Quarter, who ordered his Men to fire into the thicket of them. Never were Creatures in greater Terror and Consternation, as imagining their Destruction to come from the Gods; and, if Atkins had obeyed my Orders, and retreated unperceived, they had fled to their Canoes, without any farther Attempt; but, seeing him and his small Party, they came on again with the greatest Fury.

In short, we were forced to interpose with our whole Body, to save Atkins and his Party, who was pressed very hard, and had one of the Englishmen killed by his Side, and was himself wounded. We gave three Volleys, but they were now grown so desperate, that, notwithstanding our Fire, they came up in the very Teeth of us, insomuch that we were forced to retire, and, in Truth, I must own, that, if Night had not given us a little Respite, we must have been in a great Deal of Danger.

As soon as possible I drew up my little Army upon a rising Ground, where, by the Light of the Moon, we could observe the Savages in a great Deal of Disorder; upon which we concluded it would be best to fall upon them now, and, if possible, to give them a Volley undiscovered; which we did, by the Guidance of the two Englishmen, who knew the Ground perfectly; after this we gave them three Volleys more, and then rushed in upon them with our Swords with such irresistible Fury, that they gave Way, and, making a dismal Screaming and Howling, they betook themselves to their Heels. Many of them were killed in the Flight; but indeed we were so exceedingly tired with fighting these two Battles, that we did not then pursue them to their Canoes, in which we concluded that they would immediately get to Sea; but, there happening a dreadful Storm, they were prevented in that, and many of their Canoes were lost into the Bargain.

After we had taken some Refreshment, and a little Repose, we resolved, as soon as it was light, to go to the Place of Battle in Order to make what Observations we could; and, coming at length to a full View of the Remainder of their Army, we found them lying in a miserable Posture; and, when we came within Musket-Shot, I ordered two Guns to be fired, in Order to try if they had any Notion of coming to another Engagement; and the Project answered so effectually, that they no sooner heard the Report of the first Gun, than they started up, and, in a most astonishing Manner, ran away into the Mountains. Though I confess, I had much rather the Weather would have suffered them to have gone off, without giving us farther Trouble; for now the Case was, what must be done with this great Number of savage Creatures. Great were our Debates on this Point; however, after mature Consideration, it was determined to destroy their Canoes; which when the Indians saw, they made the most hideous Out-cries; but to no Purpose, for we either burnt or disabled them all, after which they ran about a long Time, and, as they had no Arms, nor Materials to make any, so, notwithstanding their Numbers, we were the less apprehensive of being surprized by them.

Indeed our Stock of Provisions was so very small, that we came to a Resolution to drive them up into some remote Corner of the Island, and to kill as many of them as we could catch, in order to lessen their Number, and then give them some Corn to plant. Pursuant to this Resolution, we pursued them with our Guns, killing every Day one or more, till at length their Number was so reduced, that we concluded, if possible, to take one of them alive, which at last, with some Difficulty, we effected; and, using him kindly, we brought him to old Friday, who told him if they would submit and do what they were commanded, they should be used well, otherwise they should be all slain, and bid him go and assure his Companions so, who were in a most miserable starving Condition.

The poor Creatures, who were now reduced to thirty-seven, received this Offer with all the Joy imaginable, so we sent them some Food, which they ate with great Thankfulness, and made all the Promises we could desire; and, to give them their Due, they have never broke any of them to this Day.

And thus, Sir, according to the best of my Ability, I have given you an Account of what is material, that has happened in the Island, since your Departure, to this Day; by which you may perceive the wonderful Works of Providence.

When

When you inspect into the Island, you will find it Something improved in general, your Corn and Flocks increased, and the Number of your Subjects so far augmented, that, from a desolate Island, as it was before your Deliverance, here is a Prospect, with a little Industry and good Management, that it may at length become both a populous and plentiful little Kingdom.

The End of the Spaniard's Relation.

A Continuation of the LIFE of Robinson Crusoe.

THERE is no Doubt to be made but that the Spaniard gave me a faithful Account, which was exceedingly agreeable to me, and no less surprizing to the young Priest, and to all the Rest that heard it: Nor were these People less pleased with the Necessaries I brought them, which were a great Help to them in perfecting their Habitation. Wil. Atkins was grown a very sober Man, and had built his Hut with great Ingenuity; Nothing indeed, considering the Circumstance and Nature of the Place, could be finished with greater Curiosity, kept more neat, or have better Convenience; for the Habitations of the Englishmen were by much the most commodious in the Island. As to Religion, they had little among them, and the Men only taught their Wives to speak English; they were all fruitful enough, and bore each a Child once a Year, some of which were now six Years old, and very strong and healthy.

When I enquired of the Spaniard concerning their Manner of living among the Savages, they gave me a very deplorable Relation of it, adding, that they had hardly any Hopes of Support or Deliverance.

Many were the Methods they took to instruct the Savages, but to no Purpose; for they, ignorant as they were, would give no Ear to the Instructions of those to whom they owed their Lives. At the Return of their Friend, who they thought had been devoured, their Joy was great, especially when they saw the Loaves of Bread which I sent them; but, when they heard the Errand, and perceived the Boat, their Transports were inexpressible. This was the Account I had from them, and now it follows I should inform the Reader in what Condition I left them.

As it was generally agreed that they should have no more Disturbance from the Savages, so I told them I had made this Voyage chiefly for their Sakes, and that I was not come to remove them, but rather to establish and fix them upon the Island; and for that End, I had brought them all Sorts of Necessaries and Artificers, with other Persons, that would not only add to their Number, and consequently to their Defence, but would likewise be a mutual Help and Support to them. They were all together when I talked to them in this Manner. I asked them, one by one, if they had intirely forgot their former Animosities, and would engage in the stricted Friendship? to which Atkins replied, they had had Afflictions enough to make them all sober, and Enemies enough to make them all Friends; adding, that he had most justly deserved the Treatment he had received from the Spaniards, and that he was only to be blamed. Upon which the Spaniards replied, that since Will. Atkins had, upon all Occasions, behaved himself so valiantly in their Defence, all that was past should be forgotten, that he should have his Arms, and be made the next Commander to the Governor.

Upon these kind Declarations of mutual Love and Friendship, we concluded to dine together on the Morrow;

Morrow; which we did in the best Order and Formality that the Nature of the Place would permit; and, after that, I distributed to every one of them his Portion of the Necessaries I had brought over, and then divided the Island into three distinct Colonies, making my old Habitation the Metropolis, which the Spaniards inhabited.

The young Man, whose Mother was starved to Death, as before-mentioned, and the Maid, who was indeed a pious virtuous young Woman, seeing the good Disposition of Affairs, dropped their Resolution of going to the East-Indies, and both desired I would permit them to stay on the Island, and enter them among my Subjects, which I readily agreed to; and the young Woman was afterwards married, as will appear by the Sequel of the Story.

And now I come in Course to speak of the young French Priest, whose pious Behaviour, and excellent Discourses were extremely agreeable, and deserve a particular Observation. Said he to me one Day, since, under God, I owe you my Life, I shall take Care to employ it to do as much Good, and you as much Honour, as I can; and this I conceive may best be done in my Attempt to save as many of these poor Peoples Souls as I can; but at the same Time I shall take Care not to advance any Points in Religion but what you shall approve of.

I was mightily pleased with the Modesty of his Expressions, and told him he should not want my Assistance to further his good Intentions. To which he replied, he should always have a grateful Regard to my Favours, and would make it his principal Concern to behave himself in all Points as became a peaceable Man and a good Christian.

Another Morning he came to me, as I was going to the Englishmens Plantation, and addressed himself to me in the following Manner; I know, says he, you have Nothing more at Heart than the Prosperity of this Island, and, as the Blessing of God is the only Means to procure that Prosperity, I humbly submit it to your Wisdom and Goodness, whether such corrupt Practices as are now among us, ought not to be removed?

I did not at first very well apprehend what particular Corruption he hinted at; however, I desired him to bear me Company to the Englishmens Plantation, to which he readily consented, that being the Subject of what he desired to discourse with me upon. So we walked on together, and he began in the following Manner.

Sir, I must confess, I looked upon it to be a great Unhappiness, that we differ in some Points of Religion; yet we both believe and worship the same God, who having laid us down stated Rules of Obedience, we ought not willingly and knowingly to transgress them. Hereupon I desired him to explain himself, that, if it was in my Power, I might, as soon as possible, endeavour to remove those corrupt Practices. Upon which he frankly told me, That there were in the Island four Englishmen, that had cohabited with savage Women, and used them as their Wives, which can be Nothing less than Fornication, in the most literal Sense; it being well known to you, and to all the Rest of the Inhabitants of the Island, that they are not married: And now, Sir, can God be honoured in such an open and notorious Liberty? And can you, with Reason, expect a Blessing on the Island, whilst such corrupt Practices continue with Impunity, and Men are permitted to live in such an open State of Fornication? It is true you cannot be charged with Crimes that were done in your Absence, and without your Knowledge; but now the Case is entirely altered, and, if you neglect the Remedy, the Guilt will be at your Door. I was at first so dull, that I thought he meant to separate them;
but

but herein he quickly undeceived me, telling me, His Meaning was not that I should separate them, but rather link them faster together, by marrying them. The Piety and Sincerity of the Man gave me a great Deal of Satisfaction, insomuch that I promised him I would instantly go and discourse with them, and use my best Endeavour with them, that every Thing might be done according to his Desire.

When we came to the Englishmen, I first put them in Mind that I had done every Thing for them that was needful, in Order to their future Preservation in this Life; and now my only Concern was the Preservation of their Souls eternally. I asked them concerning their Manner of living with the Savage-Women; adding how scandalous it was to live in such an open and continued Course of Fornication. To which Atkins replied, that he believed the savage Women they lived with to be the most innocent Women in the World, and that they would never forsake them; and, to confirm me they were sincere, he told me, If there was a Clergyman in the Ship, they would be married to them with all their Hearts; I told them there was a Clergyman in the Ship, and advised them to go and consult the Women, and I would take Care to have the Ceremonies performed To-morrow Morning in due Form; which they all agreed to, and so it was accordingly done to their mutual Satisfaction.

In short, the Men instructed their Wives as well as they could in the Nature of the Thing they were going about, and laid them down, as far as their Capacities would allow, some general Heads of the Christian Religion; especially Atkins, who, though he had been by much the most corrupt and vicious; yet his Education had been far better than any of the Rest. After the young Priest had asked them several Questions, and they had promised to amend their Lives and to use

use their utmost Endeavours to make their Wives Christians, he married them; which was not more to my Satisfaction, than to that of the Englishmen themselves, and, indeed, it was attended with all the good Consequences that could be expected.

The Affairs of the Island being thus settled, I was preparing every Thing for going on-board, when the young Man, whose Mother had been starved, as is before mentioned, came to me, saying, As he understood there was a Clergyman on-board, that had married the Englishmen and the Savages, he had a Match to propose between two Christians, which he desired might be finished before I went. At first I thought it might be between himself and his Mother's Maid, and began to give him some Advice to the contrary; upon which he told me, I was deceived; he had Nothing to ask me, on his own Part, but a small Spot of Ground for a Plan- tation,

tation, a Servant or two, and a few Necessaries, and that I would not be unmindful of him when I came to England; but, as for the Match I am to propose to you, it is between the Englishman you call Jack-of-all-Trades and the Maid Susan.

I was agreeably surprized at the mentioning this Match, which was very suitable, the Fellow being a very active industrious Man, and the Woman a discreet, neat, cleanly, Housewife; so the Match was concluded, and they were married the same Day.

As to the sharing out the Land, I left it to Will Atkins, who, indeed, discharged the Trust with great Fidelity. As to their Laws and Government, I advised them earnestly to love one another, and to make what farther By-Laws they should think proper for their general Good and Benefit.

At our Return we called at Atkins's House, where we found the new-married Women in a close Conference with Atkins's Wife, who had been baptized: Said Atkins, 'When God has Sinners to reconcile to himself, he is never without an Instructor; for this young Woman, whom Providence has sent among us, has Sense and Religion enough to convert a whole Nation of Savages.' The young Woman blushed, and was going to rise, but I bade her sit still; telling her, I hoped God would bless her good Endeavours; and so, taking out of my Pocket a Bible, I gave it to Atkins, which he received with Marks of Gratitude and Satisfaction. After several religious Discourses, I desired the young Woman to give me an Account of the Anguish she felt, when she was starving to Death in the Ship, which she did in Terms very moving and pathetic.

Thus, having disposed every Thing in the Island in the best Manner possible, and given the People Assurance, that I would always have them in my Thoughts, Thoughts, and would be sure to send them sufficient Supplies, as often as I had an Opportunity. On the first of May, 1695, I set Sail for the Brazils, but the next Day was becalmed; and, looking towards the N. N. E. of the Island, we could perceive Something out at Sea looking very black, upon which the Mate going up the Shrouds, and taking a View with a Prospective Glass, he cried out, It was an Army. An Army, you Fool, said I, What do you mean? Nay, Sir, said he, do not be angry; for, I assure you, it is not only an Army, but a Fleet too; for I believe there are a Thousand Canoes making towards us with all Speed. As they came nearer towards us, they seemed to be very much surprized at the Sight of our Ship, not knowing what to make of us; and we, being unwilling they should come too near, near, made Signs to them to keep off, which they did; but as they retired, they let fly several Arrows, by which one of our Men was wounded.

In a little Time they had the Courage to come so near us, that they could hear us speak; upon which I ordered Friday to call to them, to know what they would have; whereupon they poured a whole Cloud of Arrows upon him, several of which went quite through his Body; and so I lost my faithful Servant and most affectionate Companion in all my Afflictions and Solitude. I was so enraged at the Death of poor Friday, that I ordered the Gunner to load with small Shot, and immediately give them a Broad-side; which he did so effectually, that thirteen or fourteen of their Canoes were over-set, and the Rest so frightened, that away they flew with all the Speed they could.

Soon after, we took up one poor Wretch, as he was swimming for his Life; but he was so stubborn and surly, that I could not prevail with him either to eat or drink, upon which I ordered him to be thrown over board; and, after we had taken him up the second Time, he came so far to himself, that he let us know that they were going with their Kings to fight a great Battle; and, when we asked him what made them come to us, and shoot at us? He answered, To make de great Wonder look.

Poor Friday was buried with all the Pomp and Decency our Circumstances would allow: And now, having a fair Wind, we made the best of our Way to the Brazils, and in a few Days came to an Anchor in the Bay of All-Saints. With some Difficulty I got on-shore with Part of my Cargoe, and, having fitted out a Vessel with Provisions for my Island and settled several Matters with my Correspondent, we set Sail for the East-Indies.

When

When we sailed from the Brasils, we made directly for the Cape of Good-Hope, having a tolerably good Voyage, steering for the most Part S. E. At the Cape we only took in fresh Water, and then sailed directly for the Coast of Coromandel. The first Place we touched at was the Island of Madagascar; where, though the People are fierce and treacherous, yet for some Time they treated us well, and gave us Commodities. I made it my chief Business to go on-shore as often as I could to make Observations; and indeed the People traded with us with so much seeming Civility, that some of the Men resolved one Night to stay on-shore in a Tent, which they had made for that Purpose; for my Part, I, with some of the Rest, thought it more safe to lie in the Boat.

About two o'Clock in the Morning, we were alarmed with the firing of Guns, and our Men's crying for Help, or they should be murdered.

The Occasion of this Fray, as we afterwards understood from them that escaped, was this. An old Woman, that sold Milk, brought with her a young Woman that sold Herbs, whom when the Sailors saw, they laid hold on her, and carried her in among the Trees; upon which the old one made such a prodigious Out-cry, that both Men and Women came to their Assistance. At the Beginning, the Fellow that began the Fray, was killed with a Lance, though at first we did not know what was become of him.

A Night or two after we resolved to go on-shore, and try if we could find out the Man that was missing. An Hour before Midnight we landed at the Place where the Action began; but, it was so dark, we could discover Nothing, till the Boatswain fell over one of the dead Bodies. We concluded to stay there there till Morning, when we discovered two-and-thirty dead Bodies lying on the Ground, whereof two were not quite dead. Having made this Discovery, I thought I had seen enough, and so was preparing to return on-board. But the Boatswain and the Rest, which were about twenty, resolved to go to the Indian Town, to try if they could find what was become of Tom Jeffreys, their Companion.

I opposed this Resolution, as too dangerous to be undertaken; but all I could say signified Nothing, they resolved to go, let the Consequence be what it would. It was not without Difficulty that they found the Town, which consisted of about two Hundred Houses, where the People being all in a profound Sleep, the Sailors concluded to divide themselves into three Bodies, and to set the Town on Fire in three Places at once, to kill all that should attempt to escape, and to plunder the Rest.

Having made this Resolution, to work they went; they had not gone far, before the first Company found their Companion Tom Jeffreys, stripped stark-naked, with his Throat cut from Ear to Ear, hanging by one Arm upon a Tree. In a House, adjoining to this Tree, they found fifteen or sixteen Indians.

They immediately set Fire to the House, and at the same time to several Others in the Town; so that, in a very little Time, the whole Place was all in Flames; and no sooner did the affrighted Creatures run out to save themselves from the Fury of the Flames, but the Sailors either drove them back again into the Fire, or killed them without Mercy. All this while they never fired a Gun, lest the Noise of that should awake the People too fast for them to destroy.

By this Time the Town was all in Flames, and the Light of the Conflagration made me very uneasy, and likewise surprized the Captain and the Men that were with him on-board, who knew Nothing of the Matter.

But, when he saw the Smoak, and heard the Guns go off, he concluded his Men must be in great Danger; upon which he took the other Boat, and with thirteen Men resolved to go to the Assistance of them let the Consequence be what it would; and, indeed, though I was sensible of the Danger we ran, yet I had no Power to stay behind.

We went directly as the Flames guided us, but, I must own, when I came upon the Place, I never beheld greater Horror, nor heard more dreadful Outcries: In short, the whole Spectacle was too dreadful to be described, and the Miseries and Astonishment of the

the

the People not to be uttered. I got into the Center, in Order to put a Stop to their farther Barbarity, and ordered some of the Men to follow me; but I had hardly spoke the Word, before the Boatswain, with four of the Men after him, came up to us, all covered with Blood and Dust. When they saw us, and knew who we were, they gave a great Halloo, in Token that more Help was come. Noble Captain, said he, these Hell-hounds have barbarously murdered Tom Jeffreys, and in Revenge we will kill them all.

When my Nephew saw his Man hanging by the Arm, with his Throat cut from Ear to Ear, he grew extremely enraged, and declared that not a Man in the Island ought to be spared: Upon which, away ran the Boatswain, with eight more, to finish the Tragedy; which being out of my Power to prevent, I got to the Boat, with only the Supercargoe, and so went on-board, sending back the Pinnace, to assist the Men, if any Thing should happen. When I got to the Boat, the Fire was almost extinguished and the Out-cries abated; but I had been but a little Time on-board, before I heard another Volley given by the Sailors, as a Signal of Victory, which was occasioned by their falling upon and destroying the Houses and Persons that lay between them and the Sea, and so they came strolling down to the Pinnace, which lay ready to receive them. Not a Man had received any particular Hurt, the poor Indians being unprepared, amazed, and confounded.

I was extremely angry with them for their Cruelty, but particularly with the Captain, who, instead of persuading them to Reason, rather prompted them to farther Mischief; nor could he say any Thing to excuse himself; but that he was a Man subject to Passion, and that he could not bear the Sight of one of his Men so barbarously murdered. As for the Rest, they only only boasted of their Revenge, and, according to all their Accounts, they destroyed one Hundred and fifty Men, Women, and Children, and burnt the whole Town to Ashes into the Bargain; and, however our Men might value themselves upon this bold Exploit, yet I always looked upon it with Detestation, and gave it the Title of The Massacre of Madagascar.

When we were under Sail, the Boatswain would be often magnifying and defending the bloody Action, which I as often dispraised and condemned; bidding them depend upon it, God would never bless their Voyage after such unparalleled Barbarity. And, as I foretold, so it happened; for, when we came upon the Persian Shore, we lost five of our Men, who, venturing too far on the Shore, were either killed, or taken and made Slaves by the Arabians. Upon this Misfortune I again reprehended them, advising them to repent. Upon this the Boatswain said, You are always disturbing us; and, as you are but a Passenger, we are not obliged to bear it; and therefore if you do not forbear for the Future I shall leave the Ship, and not sail with such dangerous and ungrateful Company.

All this I heard very patiently, being sensible, as Cases then stood, I had no Remedy; and, indeed, I thought all had been over and forgotten: But so it happened, we were now in the Road of Bengal, where, going one Day on-shore with the Supercargoe, one of the Men came, and told me, 'I need not trouble myself to come on-board any more, for that he had Orders from the Boatswain, and the Rest of the Officers, not to bring me on-board any more.'

This insolent Message much surprized me; however, I made the Fellow no Answer, but went to the Supercargoe, and desired him to go on-board immediately, and acquaint the Captain, that he might prevent the Mutiny which I had Reason to apprehend: But, before this could be done, the Matter was effected; for I was hardly gone out of the Boat, but the Boatswain, Gunner, Carpenter, with all the inferior Officers, ran to the Quarter-Deck, desiring to speak with the Captain; and then the Boatswain began to rail against me exceedingly, telling him, That if I had not gone on-shore myself, they had resolved to have compelled me to it. And farther, he had the Insolence to add, ‘That if I had not quitted the Ship, though they had had all the Respect imaginable for their Captain, and would serve him with their Lives; yet they would all have left the Ship immediately.’ Upon which the Rest cried out, One and All, one and All.

Though my Nephew was a Man that wanted neither Courage nor Resolution, yet this unexpected Behaviour shocked him exceedingly; he expostulated with them, telling them the Danger and the Injustice of such a Proceeding, but all would not do; they had fully resolved, that, if I came on-board, they would all leave the Ship; upon which, said he, ‘If this be your Resolution, I will go and acquaint him with it.’ And so he came up to me, and told me all that had passed. I am very glad to see you, Nephew, said I, and am glad it is no worse; for in Truth I expected they would have rebelled against you; I only desire you to send my necessary Things on-shore, and I will find my Way to England as well as I can. Though this vexed my Nephew to the Heart, yet, finding there was no Remedy, he took his Leave of me and went on-board, and sent me my Necessaries; and so this Matter was over in a very few Hours. And now I think I was at least a Thousand Leagues farther distant from England, than I was at my little Kingdom. My Nephew left me two Servants to attend me, who engaged to be with me me till my Return. I took Lodgings in the House of an English Woman, where were several Merchants; and indeed I liked the Company and Entertainment so well, that I continued here several Months, considering what Course I had best take. I had some valuable English Goods, a Thousand Pieces-of-Eight, and a Letter of Credit for more if I should have Occasion. The Goods I soon disposed of to Advantage, and bought here several good Diamonds, which I could easily carry about with me.

One Morning, a Merchant, with whom I was very intimate, came to me, and said, Countryman I have a Proposal to make to you, which I do not question will be to both our Advantages. To be short, Sir, we are both in a remote Part of the World, and far removed from our native Country, and yet we are in a Place where Men, that understand Business, may get Money. Now if you will put a Thousand Pounds to my Thousand Pounds, we will buy a good Ship, you shall be the Captain and I the Merchant, and we will go upon a trading Voyage.

This Proposal soon gained upon me, suiting exactly with my rambling Inclination; but it required some Time before we could get a Vessel to our Mind, or Sailors fit to man her out. In a little Time we procured both, and so we sailed away for China, and had a very prosperous Voyage, having not only gained a large Sum of Money, but withal got a good Insight into the Traffic of those Countries.

Our next Voyage was to the Spice-Islands, which proved likewise very successful; and, not long after, the Merchant and I made up our Accounts to our mutual Satisfaction. We found ourselves very rich; and now our only Concern was how to dispose of our Money. Whilst we were considering what was best to be done, it happened that a Dutch Ship of about 200 Tons came into Port. The Men pretended they were so ill, that there were not Hands sufficient to manage the Vessel, and the Captain being desirous to go to Europe, public Notice was given that the Ship was to be sold; which no sooner came to our Ears, but we bought her and would have entertained some of her Men, but they were not to be found, for, as soon as they had received their Dividend, they all went privately to the Mogul's Country; as in Truth they had Reason enough; for this pretended Captain was only the Gunner, (the real Captain and three of his Men being killed by the Malagans,) who ran away with the Ship to the Bay of Bengal, leaving the Mate and five Men more on-shore, of which you will hear more in the Sequel of the Story.

After we had bought the Ship, and fitted her with all Necessaries for her Voyage, with some Difficulty and Expence we picked up some Sailors of different Countries, and manned her tolerably well, resolving upon another Voyage to the Spice-Islands. In this Manner we traded backward and forward for five or six Years, with very good Success, and were now in the seventh Year going to China; but in this Voyage we went with contrary Winds, which beat us up and down; and no sooner were we got clear of these rugged Seas, but we found our Ship had sprung a Leak, which obliged us to put into the River Cambodia, which goes to Siam.

One Day as I was on-shore, refreshing myself, there came to me an Englishman, that was Mate to an East-Indiaman, that rode in the same River: Sir, said he, you may very well wonder at my Business, who am a perfect Stranger to you; but, notwithstanding that, I have Something to impart to you, that concerns you very nearly, and it is the imminent Danger you are in that has brought me to you. Danger!

said I, I know of no Danger, unless that our Ship is a little leaky, and that I intend shall be rectified as soon as possible. I believe, said he, you will find other Employment. The Town of Cambodia is about 10 Leagues higher, and 3 Leagues on this Side lie 3 Dutch and 2 English Ships, and will you venture up farther into the River, without considering whether you have Force enough to fight them all?

I knew not what he meant by this Discourse, and, turning short upon him, Sir, said I, I know no Reason I have to be afraid either of the Dutch or English: I am no Interloper, and what Business then can they have with me? Well, says the Man, if my Advice is of no Weight with you, you may take your own Way; however, I am very sorry you should be so much an Enemy to yourself: I will be plain with you, unless you put to Sea immediately, you will be attacked by five Long-Boats full of armed Men, and yourself hanged for a Pirate, if you are taken; and, Sir, I thought such a Piece of Intelligence deserved better Treatment. Sir, said I, you shall not find me ungrateful; let me beg you therefore to explain yourself, and I will put to Sea immediately. Why then, in short, the Matter is this: You know very well that your Captain, with three of his Men, were killed by the Malagans, and that you, or some Others that were on-board, ran away with the Ship, and are turned Pirates. Now, Sir, this is the Substance of what I have to say, and I can only farther assure you, that, if they can lay their Hands on you, they will execute you without Ceremony.

Sir, said I, though no Man came more honestly by the Ship than I did, yet, as you represent the Matter, I think I ought to be upon my Guard, and I heartily thank you for your Information. Come, said he, it is no Matter for Ceremonies; if you value your your own Life and the Lives of your Men, get out to Sea as fast as you can. I am very well satisfied, said I, in your Sincerity and the Service you have done me, pray therefore tell me what Recompence I shall make you? Only take me with you, said he, and, if you find what I have told you to be true, I refer myself for a Recompence to your Generosity.

your

So reasonable did this appear in every Particular, that we went immediately on-board together, where we were no sooner entered, but my Partner welcomed me with the joyful News, that they had stopped the Leak. I am glad of that, said I; but come, let us make all the Haste we can to weigh Anchor; but, whilst we were busy in that, a Sailor called to the Captain, and told him, there were Sloops coming after us; upon which the Captain, taking his Prospective-Glass, and looking out, saw five Sloops, full of armed Men, in full Chace after us; upon which he immediately sent one of the Sailors to give us Notice. Very well, said I, I am fully convinced there is Something in it; and so I went upon the Deck, and told the Men, That we were in Danger of having the Ship seized, and being executed as Pirates; and asked them, if they would faithfully stand by us, and by one another? To which they unanimously replied, They would stand by us, and fight for us to the last Drop of their Blood. Then I asked the Captain, which Way he thought was best to defend ourselves; who replied, he believed it was the safest to keep them off with our great Guns; and accordingly the Gunner was ordered to load the Guns with Small-shot, and to bring them to bear before and aft; and thus, the Deck being cleared, we were in all Points prepared for an Engagement.

We stood out to Sea, but still the Boats followed us very close. We could perceive the two foremost were English, which were a-head of the Dutch by two Leagues; hereupon we fired a Gun, and hung out a Flag of Truce, in Order for a Parley; but, finding they bore down upon us with all the Sail they could, we fired upon them with Ball, and then bade them keep off at their Peril. But all this signified Nothing; for, depending upon their Numbers, they were absolutely bent upon Mischief. We made several Shots at them as they came forward, killed several of their Men, and sunk one of their Boats, and, manning out our Pinnace, we saved three of their Men from drowning, who were brought on-board. After a very hot Action, we got out so far to Sea that they could not pursue us without Danger; and so, changing our Course to the Eastward, we got quite out of the Course of European Ships.

When we were got out to Sea, enquiring more particularly into the Meaning of all this, the Dutchmen let us into the whole Secret, telling us, that the Fellow, we bought the Ship of, was an errant Thief, and that he ran away with the Ship; that the Captain was treacherously murdered, and that he and four more were forced to the Woods for Safety; and that, at length, by Means of a Dutch Vessel in its Way to China, that came in accidentally to take in fresh Water, they were preserved. He farther told us, That they were informed that the Fellow sold the Ship at Bengal, and she was turned Pirate and had taken several Prizes.

After mature Consideration, we concluded it best for us to return to Bengal, where, being known, we might best prove how we came by the Ship, and where we were sure to meet with some Justice, and not be hanged first and judged afterwards: But, upon second and more deliberate Thoughts, we all agreed that, by passing by Batavia, we ran too great a Hazard, zard, and therefore we determined to change our Course, and sail towards the Coast of China, and there dispose of the Ship, and then get another, and make the best of our Way to Europe. This being generally agreed to, we steered away N. N. E. but, meeting with contrary Winds, which blew hard against us, our Voyage grew very troublesome and tedious, and our Provisions were almost exhausted; and, what was still worse, we were apprehensive, that the Ships, whose Boats we had handled so rudely, might be in the Road before us, which in Consequence must be fatal to us. Upon these melancholy Considerations we again resolved to change our Course, and try if possibly we could not make some Harbour belonging to the Portuguese. With this Resolution we set forward for the Bay of Tonquin, in Order to sail from thence to Macon, a Town once possessed by the Portuguese, and where there are still many European Families.

We came in Sight of this Place early next Morning; but, considering our former Circumstances, we put into a small River, till we had enquired what Ships were in the Road, and how Matters stood; and indeed this prudent Step was the Occasion of our happy Deliverance; for next Morning there came in two Dutch Ships, and a third without any Colours; and in the Evening two English ones.

The River where we lay was but small, and the Country wild and barbarous, and the Inhabitants all Robbers, having no Correspondence with any other Nation; and, among other barbarous Customs, they have this particularly: When any Ship is driven on their Coast, they immediately seize her, and make all her Men Slaves; so that here we found ourselves surrounded with Enemies, both by Sea and Land.

As we found our Ship was very foul and leaky, we thought to cleanse her in this Place; but, while this was doing, the Inhabitants, who, I believe, had never seen a Ship upon the Careen before, and not perceiving our Men, who were at Work, presently imagined that the Ship had been cast away, and lay upon the Ground; and accordingly they surrounded us with five or six large Boats full of armed Men, with a Resolution to plunder the Ship, and carry the Men away Slaves to their King; but, when they saw our Men at Work upon the Outside of the Ship, they looked upon us with the greatest Confusion imaginable; neither could we imagine what their Design was: However, to prevent the worst, we handed down some Arms, and indeed it was well we did, for, in less than a Quarter of an Hour, they came scouring upon us with all their Force.

Indeed, we lay but in an ill Posture to receive them, and, before the Men could come on-board, they had seized one of the Sailors; but the Fellow soon disengaged himself, and killed the Pagan that first laid hold on him; however, this was little to the Purpose, considering their Numbers, and, I really believe, if it had not been for a lucky Accident, we had been all lost. The Thing was this; the Carpenter, who was stopping the Hole in the Ship, had two Kettles, the one full of boiling Pitch, and the other with Rosin and Tallow, &c. And, as two or three Infidels were entering the Boat, the Carpenter's Mate saluted them with a Ladle-full of boiling Liquor, which had such an Effect, that, being half naked, it made them roar and leap into the Sea, which the Carpenter perceiving, he took his Mop, and, dipping it into the Pitch-kettle, so sprinkled it among them, that they all ran frightened away, crying and howling in a most terrible Manner.

I must own I was extremely pleased at the Outcome of this Adventure; however, we lost no Time to put the Ship in a Posture of Defence, and, as soon as we could, we put to Sea again, having resolved to put into the first trading Port we came near. After some Days Sail, we came within Sight of Shore, and, standing in, a Boat came off to us, with an old Portuguese Pilot on-board, who offered us his Service; we very gladly accepted it, and sent the Boat back again: In short, the old Man went with us, and, as we sailed along, I asked him, if there were no Pirates in those Seas. He told me, he had only heard of one, that was seen in the Bay of Stam, about a Month ago, nor was she built for a Runner neither, but only a Ship that the Men had run away with, the Captain having been murdered by the Malagans; and, I can tell you this, if some Dutchmen, that came pretty near them the other Day in the River Cambodia, had laid their Hands upon them, they would have hanged every one of the Rogues upon the Yard-Arm, without any farther Ceremony.

Being sensible that this old Pilot could do us no Harm, I told him how the Case stood with us, and desired him to carry us to Nanquin, where neither English nor Dutch Ships came. Said the old Man, You have taken the right Course to steer to the North; and, if I might advise, I would have you sell the Ship at Cbina: But, said I, in doing that, I may betray innocent People. No, replied he, I know the Dutch Commanders, and will take Care they shall be rightly informed of the whole Matter. Whilst these Things were under Debate, we sailed directly for Nanquin, and, in about 13 Days Time, we came to an Anchor in the Entrance into the Gulph, where we were informed that two large Dutch Ships were gone before us, and that we should certainly fall into their Hands.

What to do we could not tell; but the old Man told us there was a little Harbour about 40 Leagues to the Southward, and, if we could get thither, no Dutch or English Ships ever came thither, and there we might be safe. This Advice was generally approved, and thither, by the honest Pilot's Direction, we arrived in Safety, after five Days sailing; we went directly into the Port, and landed to our unspeakable Joy and Satisfaction.

Being now safe on shore, our Pilot soon got us a Lodging and a Warehouse for our Goods, and then brought us acquainted with three Missionary-Priests; that were there converting the People to Christianity. After we had settled a Sort of a Correspondence with them, our next Concern was to dispose of our Goods, which we did some Time after, to our full Satisfaction, to an eminent Merchant of Japan. We were 1000 Leagues farther from Home than we were at Bengal, and, having disposed of our Ship, all the Hopes we had, were, that, at the next Fair, we might perhaps purchase another Vessel that would carry us and our Goods where we pleased. Upon these Hopes we resolved to continue here; and, to divert ourselves, we took several little Journeys into the Country, and spent ten Days to see the City of Nanquin, which was regularly built, and tolerably well fortified: At our Return, we found one of the Priests going to Pequin, who solicited us with great Earnestness to bear him Company thither, which we both agreed to do. We were 25 Days in our Journey through that miserable Country, and had an Opportunity in our Passage to see two or three of the Chinese Esquires, with their Manner of travelling there, which was the most ridiculous Sight I ever saw, and rather merited our Scorn and Contempt than Admiration.

At length we arrived at the great City of Pequin, where we had scarcely been a Week, before the old

Portuguese

Portuguese brought us Word, that there was a great Caravan, and several Polish Merchants, in a short Time, preparing to go by Land to Muscovy, and that if we pleased we might take the Opportunity. This was very good News for us; and so we went to work as fast as we could to dispose of what Goods we had at the Port, and to buy such Others as we thought would turn to the most Advantage. We set out of Perquin, in Company with about five hundred of several Nations, the Beginning of February; and in two Days we passed through a Gate in the great Wall, said to be one Thousand English Miles in Length. We then entered a Country under the Power of the poor thieving Tartars, of whom we perceived several small Parties at a Distance from us. One Day our Leader gave us Leave to go hunt; ing, when it was our Chance to meet with about forty of these starving Wretches in a Body; who no sooner perceived us, but one of them blew a Horn, at the Sound of which forty or fifty more came up immediately. Hereupon, one of the Scotch Merchants ordered us to advance, and attack them without Delay: They let fly a few random Arrows at us, that fell short, and did us no Manner of Harm; and, when we came near enough to fire upon them with our Pistols, they ran away with the greatest Confusion. So our Battle with these thievish Tartars ended without any Blood-shed on our Side. We still travelled at least a Month more through the Emperor of China's Country, till at length we came to the City of Naum, which is a strong Frontier of the Chinese Empire, being often disturbed in our Passage by straggling Tartars. We stayed at Naum but one Day, and then continued our Journey, passing several Deserts and great Rivers; and, on the 13th of April, we came to the Frontier of Muscovy; and, as we passed, we found the Garrison was filled with Christian Soldiers, for the Benefit of Travellers and Commerce; but the common People were all Pagans, the most miserable Wretches I ever beheld. Whilst we stoped to refresh at one of these Towns, I had an Opportunity to observe them at the Worship of one of their Idols, which was the most ugly Representation that ever I beheld in my Life. I cannot describe it to you without Horror: However, we found Means to destroy it before we left the Place, for which we had like to have paid very dear; for the next Day they came to the Governor to demand Satisfaction for the Loss of their Idol, and, if we had not deceived them, and got off by a Stratagem, we had been all destroyed.

The next Place we came to was the City of Jaravena, Method would be to ...

Arkangel, where it was impossible to want a Ship either for England, Holland, or Hamburg.

One Night I happened to fall into the Company of an exiled Prince, but a very fine Gentleman, whose Virtue struck me into such a deep Respect, that I proposed a Method for his Enlargement: He refused the Offer, and gave me several Reasons for so doing:
But, said he, I have a Son, and, if you will be assistant to him, I shall take it kinder than if done to me. This I very readily complied with; and so the young Prince was sent for, who brought with him a noble Equipage, and a considerable Quantity of Furs and other valuable Merchandize.

When we had settled all our other Affairs, the next Thing to be considered was, the Method of travelling, which we concluded would be best and safest to avoid the great Towns, and take the By-Roads. After we had passed the River Cama, as we were obliged to do, we came to a little City on the European Side, but the People were most of them Pagans, as in the more remote Part of the Country. From this Place we were to pass a Desert 200 Miles in Breadth, and were set upon, in our Passage, by a large Troop of Calmuks Tartars, from whom we did make a Shift to escape, but not without the greatest Difficulty and Danger. In short, we were forced to make ourselves a Sort of Fortification of the Boughs of Trees, which stood us in such Stead, that, though we were several Times attacked with all the Fury imaginable, yet they could never break in upon our little compact Body; and so, by the Stratagem of a Fire, we got off in the Night, and saved the Camels and all the Rest of the Merchandize.

After

After we had passed the River Kitza, we came to a large Town, named Osmoys, where we heard that several Troops of Tartars had been abroad, but that we were now past Danger. We came next to Laxrenfsky, where we hired Boats to carry our Luggage; so we arrived at Arkangel on the 13th Day of July, after a Year, five Months, and three Days, Journey. We sailed from Arkangel on the 20th of April, and came into the Elbe on the 13th of September following. Here my Partner and I sold our Goods, and divided the Money; and my Share, after all our Losses, came to 3475*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* At Hamburgh, my young Lord took his Leave, in Order to go to the Court of Vienna, not only for Protection, but for the Sake of corresponding with his Father, and the Rest of his Friends. And, after four Months Stay at Hamburgh, I came back to the Hague, and embarked in a Packet-boat for England, and arrived at London on the 10th of January, 1705, after ten Years and nine Months Absence.

The End of the Second Volume.

ROBINSON CRUSOE'S
V I S I O N
OF THE
ANGELIC WORLD.

V O L. III.

I. SOLITUDE is a noble Refiner of the Mind, and fills it with the brightest Ideas of Heaven and heavenly Things. Men, in a religious Solitude, may be truly said to enjoy themselves, and are never alone when they are alone. They are delivered from the Snares and Temptations of the World; and, when they converse with themselves, are certain they do not converse with an Enemy.

By Solitude I do not mean that Men should utterly renounce all Conversation, and retire into Cells and Monasteries; this I look upon to be an unnecessary, and perhaps a sinful, Restraint: But that Solitude, which I am now recommending, is a Retirement of the Soul and Mind, in Order to a nearer and more refined Conversation with Heaven. In such a religious Solitude the truest Peace and Tranquillity are to be found and established, even that eternal Peace of God, which passes all Understanding, and is the only sure Foundation of Content upon Earth and of everlasting Happiness in Heaven.

II. Honesty, in the strictest Sense of it, such as is prized by good Men and pretended to by all, is another large Step towards the angelic World. Honesty is best seen in its own native Simplicity, and wants no fine Speeches, or the Embellishment of Words, to set it off. Honesty, in general, is, doing to Others as we would they should do unto us; it is keeping a Conscience void of Offence towards God and towards Man. An honest Man does not only all the Acts of Justice which the Law obliges him to, but likewise all the friendly, kind, and generous, Acts, that fall in his Power; he has always Solomon's Maxim uppermost in his Thoughts, That a good Name is better than Life, and is a precious Ointment, Ointment, which when a Man has once lost, he has Nothing worth keeping.

III. The next Step to the angelic World is the patient suffering of Affliction, which should always be looked upon as a Rod, in the Hands of God, to chastise us for our Sins. Many Times injured Innocence may be abused, but we often find, in the End, that the more it is depressed the higher it rises, while the Justice of God secretly pursues the Oppressor, and then seldom leaves him till it overtakes him to his Destruction. The whole Substance of suffering under unjust Persecution, and bearing up under it with Christian Fortitude and Resignation, is very well expressed, in the following Verses, by a Gentleman that was under the Misfortune of an unjust Persecution.

*O mighty God! who know'st my Innocence,
And bear'st my Charge, as guilty of Offence;
Prisons and Chains do stare me in the Face,
And my false Friends pursue me with Disgrace.
They view my Ruin with exceeding Joy,
And many Ways they seek me to destroy;
Few Friends I have; and ev'n, among those few,
Some I have found I cannot say are true;
Their Malice, long conceal'd, at length is shewn,
And now I've no Redress, but Thee alone;
And 'tis to Thee, O gracious God, I come,
To beg of Thee to save me from my Doom:
Spare me, O God, accept my Pray'rs and Tears,
And free me from the World's destructive Snares;
At least, while I am suffering, I implore,
Comfort my Soul, and I will ask no more.*

Now, these Virtues, before-mentioned, give us a Prospect of the immortal angelic Vision; and the contrary Vices sink our Understanding, destroy our Reason, and, which is worse, destroy our Peace of Mind, without which it is impossible we should be tolerably happy: For Peace is the Daughter of Virtue, and Contentment the Sister of Peace.

*Bow, mighty Reason, to th' Almighty's Name;
For God and Peace are just the very same:
Where there is Peace, Heav'n shews a charming Face;
And Want of Peace is Hell in ev'ry Place.
Blest Charms of Peace! how sweet are all those Hours
We pass in thy Society!
Afflictions lose in thee their acid Pow'rs,
And turn to Joys when they are join'd to thee!*

They

They mistake very much, who think that an honest moral Life destroys the Composure of the Mind, and renders it unfit for Society; it rather inspires us with innocent Mirth, which a wicked Man is utterly incapable of enjoying.

*Let the angelic World, or Happiness,
Be what it will, 'tis best describ'd by Peace:
No Storms can hurt without, or Storms within,
No Fear, no Danger, there, because no Sin.
'Tis all a bright essential Happiness,
Because he dwells therein whose Name is Peace.*

They are much in the Wrong who think Religion or strict Morality discomposes the Mind, and renders it unfit for Society; for it is rather that which inspires us indeed with innocent Mirth, without that counterfeit Joy that vicious Men appear with; and, indeed, Wit is as consistent with Religion as Religion is with Good-Manners; nor is there any Thing in the Limitation of Virtue and Religion that should abate the Pleasure of it, but, on the contrary, increase it.

But, on the other Hand, many Men, by their own Vices and Intemperance, disqualify themselves for Conversation, being of cynical, morose, surly, and rude, Tempers, though they boast themselves otherwise. For some, abounding too much in Pride, think they are above Others, and, in this Case, Self-conceit is the Bane of human Society: For how shall any Man receive any Advantage from the Conversation of Others, who believes himself qualified not to learn any Thing from them? This confirms a Man to be a Fool, for it is impossible he should be so, if he were but once convinced of his Folly.

If Fools could their own Ignorance discern, They'd be no longer Fools, because they'd learn.

Satyr has a great Deal to remark on the Conversation of such; as their vain Repetitions, Catch-words, Laughings, and Gestures; particularly of the French, Spanish, and Scotch, Fools. Conversation is immoral where the Discourse is indecent, immodest, scandalous, slanderous, and abusive: And this is too much practis'd by Beaus, Fops, Atheists, and conceited Persons, who, instead of appearing Wits and Gentlemen by it, prove themselves the Reverse in each Particular. What Wisdom is there in Men's giving themselves the Liberty to talk Blasphemy, in Defiance of Heaven, the Majesty of which they are glad to own with their latest Breath? Or, rather, how great is their Folly, and how much is it expos'd, by affronting their best Friend, even God himself, before Men, whose Notions are uncertain, and yet who are found trembling when the Fear cometh?

As to reforming these Errors, we know how much the Laws have provided against them; but let me for once prevail with a Man to examine his Vice, dissect its Parts, and view its Anatomy, how disagreeable must it be to him as a Man, a Gentleman, and a Christian; how despicable in its highest Fruition; how destructive to his Senses, Estate, and Reputation; and how beastly in its public Appearance; such a Man would certainly be out of Love with Vice, and the Reformation would be Half brought to pass.

Now, as to atheistical Discourse, how empty, and yet how prevailing, is such miserable Sophistry upon weak Judgements! and this is evident in the following Lines upon the System of Prometheus.

*The great Promethean Artist, Poets say,
First made the Model of a Man in Clay;
Contriv'd the Form o'th' Parts, and, when he had done,
Stole vital Heat from the prolific Sun:
But not a Poet tells us, to this Day,
Who made Prometheus first, and who the Clay;
Who gave the great Prolific to the Sun,
'And where the Work productive was begun.*

There are some, according to the Philosophy of Epicurus, who fancy the World was made by a strange fortuitous Conjunction of Atoms, without any pre-existent Influence or immediate Power.

*Thus some have dreamt of Atoms strangely hurl'd
Into the decent Order of the World,
And so by Chance combin'd; from whence began
The Earth, the Heav'n, the Sea, and Beast, and Man.*

But, let them say what they will of the divine Power, it is certain their secret Thoughts reflect upon them in the very Act, and give the Lie to their Arguments, as in the following Lines.

*Nature pays Homage with a trembling Bow,
And conscious Men but faintly disallow;
The secret Trepidation racks the Soul,
And, while he says, No God, replies, Thou Fool!*

The great Scandal such Discourse gives to Virtue, ought, methinks, to be punished by the Judges: Make a Man once cease to believe in God, and he has Nothing left to limit his Soul but mere Philosophy. And how incongruous is this to Government, that a Man should be punished for Drunkenness or Swearing, and yet have the Liberty to affront, and even to deny, the Majesty of Heaven! If a Man gives the Lie to a Gentleman in Company, or perhaps speaks a Word without any offensive Meaning, he flies into a Passion, quarrels, fights, and perhaps murders him, or afterwards terwards prosecutes him at Law with the utmost Violence and Oppression: But, surely, it is a very vulgar Error, in our Behaviour, not to shew our Resentment when we hear the Honour and Essence of God slighted and denied, his Majesty abused, and Religion bantered and ridiculed in common Discourse. Besides, it is an Affront upon ourselves; for, either the Person thinks we are Atheists, like himself, or ventures to impose us, accounting us either as Fools, that know not when we are put upon, or Cowards, that dare not resent it; and therefore such Discourse ought, for Good-Manners Sake, to be avoided, which carries in it so many destructive Consequences both to our Souls and Bodies.

The next Thing to be refrained from is obscene Discourse, which is the Language only of Proficients in Debauchery, who never repent but in a Jail or an Hospital, and whose Carcasses stink as bad as their Discourse; until the Body becomes too nasty for the Soul to stay any longer in it. For, if Custom has made these Things uncommon, or has concealed, or at least banished, them from the Voice of Conversation, it is certainly a Sin against Custom to expose them again. No Man can justify his lewd Discourse, but he, at the same Time, throws away his Cloth; for, to cover himself with his Hands, and uncover himself with his Tongue, are Contradictions in their own Nature, and one condemns the other. And why is not the Ear as liable to be offended as the Eye, since both are but the common Organs of the Understanding?

Nor is False-Talking less to be avoided: For Lying is the Sheep's Cloathing hung upon the Wolf's Back; it is the Pharisee's Prayer, the Whore's Blush, the Hypocrite's Paint, the Murderer's Smile, the Thief's Cloak; it is Joab's Embraces and Judas's Kiss; In a Word, it is Mankind's Darling, and the Devil's distinguishing Character. Some add Lies to Lies, till they not only become improbable but even impossible too. Others lie for Gain, to deceive, delude, and betray; and a third Sort lie for Sport, or Fun, as the Boys call it, which betrays such an Emptiness in it, as not only to merit the Contempt of all Persons, but also to make that Person be disbelieved even when he speaks the Truth. And then, indeed, they can lie no longer; for he, that Nobody believes, can never lie any more, because Nobody can be deceived by him. There are other Liars, who are personal and malicious, who foment Differences, and carry Tales from one House to another, in Order to gratify their own envious Tempers, without any Regard or Reverence for Truth, (a Thing of no Value or Esteem to them in their Discourse,) till, at last, they are like the Jack-Pudding or the Stage-player, Stage-player, who, to make Others Sport at the Hazard of their immortal Souls, come at last penitently to own that they have played the Fool.

IV. RELIGION. I doubt, indeed, that there is much more Devotion than Religion in the World, more Adoration than Supplication, and more Hypocrisy than Sincerity: And it is very melancholy to consider, what Numbers of People there are furnished with the Power of Reason and Gifts of Nature, who are nevertheless abandoned to the grossest Ignorance and Depravity! But it would be uncharitable for us to imagine that they will certainly be in a State of Damnation after this Life; for how can we think it consistent with the Goodness of an infinite Being to damn those Creatures, when he has not furnished them with the Light of his Gospel? Or how can such proud, conceited, and cruel, Persons prescribe Rules to the Justice and Mercy of God!

The Moors of Barbary are Mahometans, whose Religion is confined to the Biram and Ramazan, the Feast and Fast, the Mosque and the Bath; reading the Alcoran, on one Hand, and performing the Washing and Purification, on the other, make up their religious Exercise. Among these appear no generous Temper, no Compassion, to be found.

When I was among the Natives of Africa, I perceived many of them without the least Notion of a Deity. At the Brazils, the Natives had Abundance of Religion, but were bloody and cruel; being guilty of Murder, human Sacrifices, Witchcrafts, and conjuring. The East-Indians are generally Pagans or Mahometans, having such a Compound of savage Customs with them as render them notorious for Fraud and Theft; and, though the Subjects of the Great-Mogul and the Inhabitants of Ceylon live under severe Discipline, yet it is a very hard Thing to find them honest. As to the Chinese Religion, it is a Foundation, or what we may call an Element, of light Morality and Superstition, huddled together in a Rhapsody of Words without Consistency; and, indeed, with very little Reasoning in it: Their Idols are made according to their Priests Inventions. The Persians worship the Sun; the Tartarians form themselves Idols of Beasts; the former I think, of the two, is the best, because it affects all Things round it.

*Great Soul of Nature! from whose vital Spring
Dew, Heat, and Life's diffus'd through ev'ry Thing!
Guide to the Moon and Stars by different Ray,
The Queen of Night, the Monarch of the Day,
The Moon, and Stars, and Earth, and Planets, obey.*

Wben

*When darker Nations see thee plac'd on high,
And feel thy Warmth their genial Heat supply,
How imperceptibly thy Influence
Slides through their Veins and touches ev'ry Sense, —
By glimmering Nature led, they bow the Knee, Mistake their God, and sacrifice to thee!*

We are told by some People, that the great Image, which King Nebuchadnezzar set up to be adored by his People, held the Representation of the Sun in the Right-hand, as the principal Object of Adoration. But, to wave this Discourse of Heathens, how many self-contradicting Principles are there held among Christians? And how do we frequently doom one another to the Devil, while all profess to worship the same Deity, and to expect the same Salvation!

When I was at Portugal, there was held at that Time the Court of Justice of the Inquisition. All the Criminals were carried in Procession to the great Church, where eight of them were habited in Gowns and Caps of Canvas, whereon the Torments of Hell were displayed, and they were condemned and burnt for imputed Crimes against the catholic Faith and blessed Virgin.

I am sorry to make any Reflections upon Christians; but, indeed, in Italy the Roman Religion seems more cruel and mercenary than in any Place upon Earth; and a very judicious Person, who travelled thence to Turkey, tells us, That there is only the Face, the outward Pomp, of Religion there; that the Church protects Murderers and Assassins, and then delivers the civil Magistrates over to Satan for doing Justice; interdicts whole Kingdoms, and shuts up the Church, for Want of being paid a few ecclesiastical Dues, and so puts a Stop to Religion for Want of their Money: That the Court of Inquisition burnt two Men for speaking dissonourably of the blessed Virgin; and the Missionaries in China tolerated the worshipping the Devil by their new Converts: That Italy was the Theatre, where Religion was the grand Opera, and that the Popish Clergy were no other than the Stage-Players.

Being once in a City in Flanders, I perceived a great Comotion of People there, who were searching for a certain Scelerate, or wicked Man, who had broken into a Chapel in the City, and stolen the Pix, or Casket, where the sacred Host was deposited, that is, what they believe to be the real Body of our blessed Saviour, being transubstantiated, as they call it, from the Substance of Bread. It was not long before he was found; nor his Execution much longer deferred. Before his Death he confessed he had thrown it into a house of Office; which being searched, and the Wafer not found, immediately the Place was judged proper

per to be consecrated, ipso facto turned into an Oratory, and the devout People flocked to it to expiate, by their Prayers, the Dishonour done to the Lord God, by throwing his precious Body into so vile a Place.

As to the Religion in Poland, they deny Christ to be the Messiah, or that the Messiah was come in the Flesh; and, as to their Protestants, they are the Followers of Jelius Socinus, who denied our Saviour's Divinity, and have no Concern about the divine Inspiration of the Holy-Ghost.

In Muscovy their Churches are built of Wood, and indeed they have wooden Priests, though of the Greek Church. They pray as much to St. Nicholas, as the Papists do to the Virgin Mary, for Protection in all their Afflictions.

As to the Lutherans, they only differ from the Romans in believing Consubstantiation instead of Transubstantiation; but, like them, they are much more pleased with the external Gallantry and Pomp of Religion than with the real and true Practice of it. None can be more jealous of their Hierarchy than the Ecclesiastics of this Church, who are afraid to reform farther, lest, as they give a Stab to the Perquisites and Vails of God Almighty's Service in the Roman Church, modern Reformation might give the like to them; and therefore they set a Pale about the Church, persecuting and invading like the Rest. But what Charity can there be where there is no Peace? And what is Religion when there is no Charity?

In France I found a World of Priests; the Streets were every where crouded with them, and the Churches were full of Women; but certainly never was Nation so full of blind Guides, so ignorant of Religion and so void of Morals were those to whom they confess their Sins. And as for the Huguenots, some ran away for their Religion, and yet left it behind them; while those behind are mere Hypocrites, neither Papists nor Huguenots, for they go to Mass with Papists there; and, while they call themselves Protestants, bow down to the House of Rimmon.

Now it seems strange, that, while all Men own the divine Being, there should be so many different Sentiments of paying him Obedience in the Christian Church; I know not what Reason to assign for this, except it be in their different Capacities and Faculties: Let three Men read the same doctrinal Article; suppose it to be of the Trinity, or any other; why, one thinks certainly he has found out the Mystery, goes on with his Enquiries, and brings every Scripture and Passage that he thinks correspond with his first Notion: Another comes to the same Scripture, and in Search after the same Doctrine, and yet receives other Notions, quite quite different from the former, or at least very remote from them: The third Man reads over the same Text, perhaps with Indifference to the Substance, and, whether he attains to a right or a wrong Information, he comes away with as much Uncertainty as he went. Now these three Persons are enough to fill the World with Disputes about Religion. The first two, equally positive in their different Opinions, fall out and part; condemn, censure, revile, and (if they have an Opportunity) persecute, one another with their Adherents; while the third Man laughs at them all for being a Parcel of Fools, in falling out about such Things as neither of them can be certain of.

And, indeed, on this Account, we have perceived, in all Christian Countries, what mortal Feuds have been about Religion, what Wars and Bloodshed have molested Europe, till the general Cessation of the German Troubles at the Treaty of Westphalia: And, since those Times, what Persecution, in the same Country, between the Sects of Lutherans and Calvinists! And, should I take a Prospect of Home, what unhappy Divisions are there between Christians, in this Kingdom, about Episcopacy and Presbytery, the Church-of-England Men and the Dissenters; and where they withstand one another, like St. Paul and St. Peter, even to the Face; which is as much as to say, they carry on the Dispute to the utmost Extremity.

It might be a Question, why there are such Differences in religious Points, and why these Breaches are so hot and irreconcilable! All the Answer I can give to this is, that we enquire more concerning the Truth of Religion than any other Nation in the World, and the anxious Concern we have about it makes us more jealous of every other Opinion and tenacious of our own: And this is not because we are more furious, censorious, and rash, than other People; but the Truth is, we are more concerned about them; and, sensible that the Scripture is the great Rule of Faith, the Standard of Life and Doctrine, we have Recourse to ourselves, without submitting to any pretended infallible Judge upon Earth.

There is another Question pertinent to the former: What Remedy can we apply to this Malady? And to this I must negatively answer, Not to have us be less religious, that we might differ less about it, but to be more humble and more charitable; and this is striking to the very Root of all religious Differences; for, certainly, were they to be carried on with a peaceable Spirit, willing to be informed, our Variety of Opinions would not have the Name of Difference, nor should we separate a Communion and Charity, though we disagreed in some Articles of Religion.

Nor is this a less useful Question to state; nameiy, Where will our unhappy religious Differences end? To which, I hope, I may answer, in Heaven: There all un-christian and un-brotherly Differences will find a Period: There we shall embrace many a sinner, that here we think it a Dishonour to converse with; and perceive many a Heart, we have broken here with Censures, Reproaches, and Revilings, made whole again by the Balm of the same Redeemer's Blood. Here we shall perceive there have been other Flocks than those of our Fold; and that those, we have excommunicated, have been taken into that superior Communion; and, in a Word, that those contradicting Notions and Principles, which we thought inconsistent with true Religion, we shall then find reconcileable in themselves to one another and to the Fountain of Truth. If any Man ask me, Why our Differences cannot be ended on Earth? I answer, Were we all thoroughly convinced that in Heaven they would be reconciled, we should put an End to them before; but this is impossible to be done; for, as Man's certain Convictions of Truth are not equal to one another, or to the Weight or Signification of such Veracity, so neither can a general Effect of this Affair be expected on this Side of Time.

Before I conclude the Subject, I shall beg Leave to discourse a little of the wonderful Excellence of negative Religion and negative Virtue. The latter sets out, like the Pharisees, with, God, I thank thee! It is a Piece of religious Pageantry, the Hypocrite's Hope; and, in a Word, it is positive Vice; for it is either a Mask to deceive Others, or a Mist to deceive ourselves. A Man that is clothed with Negatives, thus argues: I am not such a Drunkard as my Landlord, such a Thief as my Tenant, such a Swearer as my Neighbour; neither am I a Cheat, an Atheist, a rakish Fellow, or a Highwayman: No; I live a sober, regular, retired, Life; I am a good Man, I go to Church; God, I thank thee! Now, though a Man boasts of his Virtue in Contradiction to the Vice mentioned, yet no one can be in a more dangerous State than this Man; for he is so full of himself, so persuaded that he is good and religious enough already, that he has no Thoughts of any Thing, except it be to pull off his Hat now and then to God Almighty, and thank him that he has no Occasion for him; and he has the Vanity to think that his Neighbours must imagine well of him too.

For my Part, I think that the general Slander of a prejudiced Age and a State of universal Calumny is to be preferred, where the Mind is free from the Guilt that any villainously charge; for such a Man, though the World spits upon and contemns him and threatens his Destruction, looks forward with Comfort.

I know, at the great and last Day, when the Secrets of all Hearts shall be disclosed, that we shall then be thoroughly enlightened, and plainly see how much we have been deceived in the Notions of Virtue and Vice, Religion and Irreligion, in the Characters of our Neighbours. And I really believe that we shall see many of our Neighbours, placed at the Right-hand of a righteous Judge, whom we have basely oppressed with Slanders, and whom, in this Life, we have censoriously placed at our Left-hand. And this ought to be the Support of a good Man, as the royal Psalmist says, when his Enemies have him in Derision. Scandal indeed is much worse than Slander; for the first is founded upon real Guilt, the other attacks Innocence. Nothing is a Scandal but what is true,*and Nothing a Slander but what is false; and therefore he, that fortifies himself against Reproach, must do it with a certain Reserve of real and solid Virtue.

We live in a State of universal Calumny, and how is it possible that we should have any Prospect of the angelic World, while we harbour such a cursed Guest among us? He, that will therefore qualify himself to take a View of Eternity, must first fortify himself against all the little Attacks of Scandal and Reproach, which can be no other Way effected than by the Rules of solid Virtue.

It would take too long Time to inform the Reader how these Notions of the angelic World came into my Head. When I came to put these Things together, I must own I was filled with a just Contempt of the World, and began to think that there was no real Prospect of Happiness on this Side of the angelic World!

T H E E N D.

the
and
Nov

No. Trent DEFOE 13.176⁰

Treadwell · Elizabeth · Phillips · Kirstein ·

Hyde · Bigelow · Skinner · Center · Knapp · Billings · Sewall ·

THE
WILLIAM P. TRENT COLLECTION WORKS RELATING TO
DANIEL DEFOE
AND HIS TIME

THE · PUBLIC · LIBRARY
OF · THE · CITY · OF BOSTON

Purchased from the Income of
SUNDRY TRUST FUNDS

Clement · Charlotte Harris · Whitney ·

Wales · Bradlee · Stewart · Cutter · Kimball · Ford · Reed ·

IF UNDELIVERED, PLEASE RETURN TO JOHN SALKELD,
BOOKSELLER,
306, CLAPHAM ROAD,
LONDON, S.W. 9.

To Prof. Brent,

with J. Salkeld's Compts.

Thinking that (though empty)

it might be useful.

Yours

Stochwell

S.W. 9.

18/4/22.

